HIGHLAND PARK ELECTION.

Things are waking up to a lively time in the city affairs. In addition to the candidates announced in last weeks paper other moves have developed.

Mr. John Finney is not to have a walk over without a contest. Mr. Grant announces his intention to run for that office.

George Hutter enters the list for the fourth ward.

Fred Denman contests the issue with Byron Stevens in the first ward.

W. E. Brand proposes to run in the second ward.

RE-INFORCED MEN'S CLUB.

The Fellowship Club of Highland Park has now, by its own act, enlarged its sphere and increased its responsibility.

It was probably not in the minds of its leaders to limit its actions to merely social functions of fellowship, but in accepting the terms of union with the Citizen's Association it is now definitely committed to aggressive work for the material and moral advancement of the city.

It has come into this inheritance at a time of much action and expectancy. Improvements are in the air. New duties and new responsibilities are thrust upon us.

This ought to impress the voters with a new sense of the kind of men to be elected for office. The Council should not be allowed to drift into a mere club for petty politicians who wish to make it a step to personal ends and future advancements.

What Highland Park now needs—indeed what every North Shore constituency needs—is a governing body of men who possess intelligence, ability, and above all—moral force and character.

And upon the club with its new adhesion rests the duty to guide and guard official posts against unfit occupants. As we look at the offices to be filled let us not turn merely to the list of candidates. Let the citizens look around and select men whom they shall honor with their confidence and who can and will serve the public, and let this club help to direct and select.

This may be a good time to remind the club that it owes something to young Highland Park.

We have asked, again and again, for somebody to assume the duty of inaugurating a sane national birthday. Now is the time and the club is the organization.

MR. BRYAN'S ECONOMIC SERMON

The economic conditions of all society constitute the all-pervading issue of public discussion and political action.

Money buys and sells everything material and puts a mortgage or lien upon human souls.

To the great mass of men nothing is sacred—nothing free, nothing independent,—in presence of money.

When William J. Bryan delivers, before two thousand people, his masterly address on "The Price of a Soul," he finds his keynote—not in the philosophy of men, not in the science of ages, not in the political creeds of the greatest and freest nation on earth, but in the interrogation of the Master Soul of men: "What shall it profit a man if he gains the whole world and lose his own soul?"

That will be the new emancipation—not of a clan or race—but of the whole world, when mankind will place money in its right relation to human needs and blessings and dethrone it from its present absolutism.

Mr. Bryan puts the matter in strong light when he says: "A man may earn five hundred millions or more but the men who have earned it have not had time to collect it and the men who have collected it have not had time to earn it."

But why is the mere possession of money the chief aim of men? If the most they can get out of it is food, clothing, home and travel, what magic charm is there in the possession of millions when thousands would give as much of these things as one can use, without the burden and care involved in the possession of millions?

The secret lies in the enthronement of money as the Czar of all the world. It is raised to a false position of absolutism and power that is given to no other agent in the world. By it thrones are bought and sold, governments are created or overthrown, the great instruments for the advancement of light, law and liberty, and by which they perverted or restrained: the pulpit, platform and press are bought and sold; the school is exploited for revenue, and justice is blinded, not by equity but by purchase.

This is all so true that the ringing, honest declamations of such a man as Bryan are applauded to the echo.

Some day a greater than Bryan will arise to show the world that the economic law of God is wholly perverted by giving to money a place and power that is corrupting and enslaving.

The day that we can go back to the simplicity and equality of money, as a medium of exchange only, we shall not ignore its value as an agent of commerce, but we shall strip it of its enslaving power, and it will then be no longer worth a man's while to spend his life in collecting what he does not earn, for it will be greater and more potential to earn what he does not collect.

TEACHERS' SALARIES

The Illinois Educational commission, in a report just issued, gives the minimum of teachers' salaries in a number of states. The average monthly salaries of men and women teachers in both graded and ungraded schools in Illinois is given. The report says a study of the statistics of Illinois with reference to the salaries of teachers will reveal a condition from which it is not easy for the friends of the public schools to derive satisfaction.

According to the most recent reports from the various counties, the number of teachers employed is 28,524. Of this number 5,411 are men and 23,113 are women. During the year ending June 30, 1908, the men taught an aggregate of 40,751 months and received $346,854.97, or an average monthly salary of $82.13.

HIGHLAND PARK IMPROVEMENTS

In a recent issue of the North Shore News-Letter under the title of "Looking Backward and Forward," the writer suggested several needed improvements in our city. He did not, however, by any means exhaust the list of needed improvements.

It would seem about time that the unsightly electric poles—trolley, telephone and telegraph—should be put out of sight. It may be all right when these lines run through a farm country, but the unsightly poles should not be allowed to disfigure the appearance of the streets in the heart of a city like Highland Park.

Then there is St. John's Avenue from Laurel south to Sheridan Place viaduct. Here is a main street eighty feet wide, because intended to be a principal thoroughfare, instead of being improved in accordance with the original plan, the trolley occupies one side of the streetway, a cow-path the other side, and between a strip which at best was too narrow to be either ornamental or useful as a parkway, and which is continually being narrowed by the effort of vehicles to get room enough to pass each other without colliding.

Then there is the lot southeast corner of East Laurel and St. John's Avenue, lying between St. John's and the city library building. This tract of land is in the most conspicuous part of Highland Park; just where visitors are certain to notice it whether coming to the city or passing through it on the train. It always presents a disreputable appearance. In the summer it is grown up to rank and noxious and offensive weeds, scattering their seeds far and near, and the rest of the year it is strewn with papers and other refuse. Last summer it was some of the time used as a cow pasture. The owner of that lot is a personal friend of the writer, but if he will not improve it or sell it to some one who will improve it, but continues to hold it unoccupied while its value steadily is increased by the improvements made by resident citizens and property owners, then in all fairness should not such property be assessed sufficiently to enable the city to keep it cleaned up?

LATEST ITEMS.

Our report in another column shows that Killen received 98 votes, whereas it should read 89. Mr. Woolley therefore was a successful nominee for councilman.

Mr. Geo. Hicks was the president of the Sunday School convention—not Mrs. Hicks, who was present as a delegate only.

SCHOOL BOARD INTEREST.

Great interest is manifested in school matters at Glencoe. If the Board will now advertise a mass meeting at which all the people, including the ladies, have an opportunity to learn how matters are run, there will be one of the best mass meetings ever held in this town.
