Duty Near at Hand

It may or it may not be our duty to rescue the downtrodden of a foreign land; it might be our duty to help the heathen of Africa if we had the power; but there is no doubt whatever about the obligation which rests on us to take up the trivial cases in our own homes, our own street, our own village—the duty which is nearest, and which at the same time is wholly written our power to accomplish.

Memorial Service for Mrs. Pfanstiehl

All those who gathered at the Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening, came because they loved the memory of Mrs. Anna Barnes Pfanstiehl, and desired to express their admiration for her character and life work. And this expression took form not only in their sympathy and presence, but also in many words of loving testimony, from probably twenty men and women of those present, who in an informal and heartfelt way, gave their tributes to the much loved woman whose life went out suddenly last week at her home in Somerville, N. J. The thoughts expressed, bore largely upon the graces of a rounded Christian character exemplified by a consistent life of service for others. As a mother, as a friend in need, as one possessed of a sunny and uniformly courteous disposition as a comforter in trouble, or as an earnest Christian worker. Her life so lately spent among us was reviewed by those who had stood with her efforts, and whose memories were only those inspired by the love and affection, which a noble, earnest, consecrated soul engenders in the hearts of those who are fortunate enough to have had their lives touched with that of the sanctified spirits, whose life is now transferred to a Higher Sphere of usefulness.

The sympathy, real and sincere, of this whole community goes out to her husband, the Rev. Dr. Pfanstiehl and their son Carl, in their irreparable loss.

Would there were more characters in this world such as kind, courteous, Mrs. Pfanstiehl. We need them! and can ill afford to spare them.

The Value of Know How

Benjamin Brooks, writing in Scribner's Magazine, lays a good deal of stress on the value of good old Yankee gumption in the business of contracting engineer. He must be an expert, of course, and a man of theories; but again and again, the theories will run aground and he must get down to native wit and shrewdness. As he says:—
In fact, the characteristic of simplicity is a very large and important factor in this very broad and all-embracing profession. "Nine-tenths of the business," said a very able contractor to me, "is common horse-sense."

"The easiest money I ever earned," said an old-time contractor to me, "was when I agreed to dredge the ferry slip of the Transportation Company. They had a bad plight, telegraphing everywhere for a dredger that could be towed up in a hurry; for the river had silted up their landing slip right in their busiest season, and it meant a thousand dollars a day to them. In the midst of their excitement I happened into their office and offered to dredge the slip for $500. 'Done,' said they, and we signed papers on the spot. Then I went out and hired a big tug for $5 an hour, backed her into the slip, tied her close and fast, and started the engine. In about a minute that big propeller set up such a current that the silt began floating out of the slip in tons. In two hours I called at their office again and got my $500."

Officer (to recruit who has missed every shot)—"Good heavens, man, where are all your shots going?"

Teacher of Geometry—"What? Your father told you that was the shortest distance between two points! What is your father?"

Boy—"He runs a taxicab, ma'am."—Puck.

A POCKETFULL OF SUNSHINE.

A pocketfull of sunshine
Is better far than gold;
It drowns the daily sorrows
Of the young and old;
It fills the world with pleasure
In field, and lane, and street,
And brightens every prospect
Of the moriels that we meet.
A pocketful of sunshine
Can make the world akin,
And lift a load of sorrow
From the burdened back of sin;
Diffusing light and knowledge
Through thorny paths of life.
It gilds with silver lining
The stormy clouds of strife.

Who are the "lemon squeezers of society"? They are the people who predict evil, extinguish hope and see only the worst side—people whose very look curdles the milk and sets your teeth on edge.

Grouchy people are like vinegar they have become insipid and gone sour; but vinegar is good for some purposes; so are such people. They, like drunkards, are signboards directing, and warning us that we may take a happier way.

A prominent lawyer of Toronto is in the habit of lecturing his office staff from the junior partner down, and Tommy, the office boy, comes in for the full share of the admonition. That his words were appreciated was made evident to the lawyer by a conversation between Tommy and another office boy on the same floor which he recently overheard.

"Wotcher wages?" asked the other boy.

"Ten thousand a year," replied Tommy.

"Aw, g'wan!"

"Sure," insisted Tommy, unabashed.
