Just For Fun

All Taste the Same.

"We're using a new shaving soap now," said the barber. "How do you like it?" "Well," spluttered the victim, "I don't notice any difference in the taste."

Great Was the Fall.

He proposed to her in a motor car, Then he let the levers switch; Cried both—"We are now in ecstasy— And next day they were in the ditch.

Quickly Erased.

Mr. Suburb: "My neighbour has a big dog that we're all afraid of. What do you advise? Lawyer: "Get a bigger one. Six and eight-pence, please."

Not Half Bad.

"Those apples you sent up," said Bifkins, "were not half bad." "I'm glad you liked them," rejoined the grocer cheerfully. "Yes," continued Bifkins, "only about a third of them were bad."

Dead to the World.

Mrs. Jones: "And in what part of the Continent did you spend your honeymoon, Mrs. Green?" Mrs. Green: "Well, I really don't quite know. Frank got all the tickets."

A Practical Joke.

Hotel Clerk: "I found the 'Not to be Used Except in Case of Fire' notice those 'varsity fellows stole out of the corridor." Manager: "Where?" Hotel Clerk: "They'd nailed it up over the coal shed."

The Reason Obvious.

Stubb—I notice your wife doesn't wear her 500-button gown at church any more. Penn—No; it was too embarrassing. Every time a button turned up on the collection plate the parson glanced at her.

Not a Quarrelsome Woman.

"I am proud to say," remarked Mr. Meekton, "that my wife is not what could be called a quarrelsome woman." "Indeed!" "I never knew her to quarrel in my life. She merely announces what she wants, and that's an end of the matter."

Innocently Said.

Whilst staying at the seaside a little boy wrote the following letter to his father:—"Dear Daddy—Mamma and me are having a fine time here, but I do miss the donkey. When are you coming down? Your loving son Willie."

Easily Explained.

"Well, well, little chap," said the stranger in the family, picking up one of the children, "what are you going to be when you are a man?" "Nuffin." "Nothing? Why so?" asked the stranger. "Because I'm a little girl!"

A Terrible Drop.

The smart young man—his school honors thick upon him, and his intention to teach the world in general and his father in particular, the manner in which up-to-date commerce should be conducted—stood earnestly holding forth in his father's office. "You may rely upon me, sir," he was saying with fervid emphasis. "I will devote my whole life to the interests of the business. It shall be my aim and ambition to keep the family name free from stain." "Good!" said the old man gruffly. "That's the spirit. Tell the office-boy to give you the whiting and ammonia; then go and polish up the brass name-plate on the door."

A Good Idea.

Mrs. Young (proudly): "The landlord was here today; I gave him the quarter's rent and showed him the baby." Mr. Young (who was kept awake last night): "It would have been better, my dear, if you had given him the baby, and shown him the quarter's rent."

An All-Round Patriot.

Smith—Good morning, Jones! I hear you have a son and heir. Jones—Yes, our household now represents the United Kingdom. Smith—How's that? Jones—Why, you see, I'm English, my wife's Irish, the nurse is Scottish, and the baby wants!

And Knox Meant It.

"Now, Mr. Knox," said the professor of physiology, "can you tell me with what faculty a man could most easily dispense?" "Yes, sir," answered the student. "Good," said the professor. "Which one?" "The college faculty," replied young Knox soberly.

Furs and Their Origin.

"Where do we get our most valuable furs?" asked the teacher. "From the fir tree," said the wide-awake boy. This recalls a story of a young woman from the country who entered a draper's and asked for a muff. "Yes, miss," said the shopman. "What fur?" "What fur?" echoed the girl in astonishment. "Why, to keep my hands warm, of course!"

The Other Way About.

"I understand that you said some of my jokes were as old as the hills?" interrogated the struggling humorist in crestfallen tones. "My dear sir, you have been misinformed," sighed the busy editor. "What I said was that some of the hills were as old as your jokes."

An Overworked Member.

"John," said the doctor's wife, "my tongue looks bad this morning. There must be something wrong with me." "Yes," replied the doctor. "Over-worked, perhaps." "But really, I haven't been working hard." "I didn't say you were over-worked. I referred to your tongue."

Demonstration.

Mrs. Mulvaney (the laundress) "Indade ma'am, and its miserable I am. I am-but just on me feet wid the pain in me back, an' Jimmy, my boy here, he's as bad off; he has a cough on 'im that sounds loike an empty bar'l. Cough for the lady, Jimmy!"

The Test of Quality.

Mrs. Neurich (in music store): "I want a piece of music for my little girl, who is learning to play the piano." Clerk: "Yes, ma'am. Here is 'The Maiden's Prayer' for sixpence. How would that suit?" Mrs. Neurich: "Oh, she's further advanced than that. Why, last week she played a piece that cost one-and-eight. Haven't you something for about four shillings?"

An Awkward Mistake.

In a small country church a baby was brought forward for baptism. The young minister, taking the little one in his arms, spoke as follows, "Beloved hearers, no one can foretell the future of this little child. He may grow up to be a great astronomer like Sir Isaac Newton or a great Labor leader like John Burns, and it is quite possible he might become, like Mr. Asquith, Prime Minister of all England." Turning to the mother, he said, "What is the name of this child?" "Mary Ann!" was the reply.
