Cling to Those Who Cling to You.

As you daily journey onward o'er life's rough and rugged road,
Beset by sore temptations, burdened by care's heavy load,
And a helping hand is given by friends faithful, good and true,
Show your true appreciation, cling to those who cling to you.
When [of money we have plenty, and worldly goods galore,
Of friends we have no lack, then we can count them by the score,
Fair-weather friends are numerous, but those who e'er prove true
Are few and far between, then cling to those who cling to you.
When misfortunes overtake us, and riches from us fly,
Our loyal friends stand by us, while our sham friends pass us by,
Pay no heed to those who flatter, don't desert old friends for new,
Ever bear in mind this motto: "Cling to those who cling to you."
Be willing then to lend a hand to help a friend in need,
Speak kindly, always prove yourself to be a friend indeed;
Don't let a spiteful, cruel, bitter word cause you to rue
Its utterance; don't be hasty, cling to those who cling to you.
Do not speak the cruel bitter word that always wounds the heart,
You never can recall it, 'tis like a poisoned dart,
Do all you can to awaken love, be honest, just and true,
Stand by your benefactors, cling to those who cling to you.
God made us all dependent on each other for support,
Protection, and encouragement, and therefore we all ought
To do to others as we would that they to us should do,
Then obey the Golden Rule, and cling to those who cling to you.
—Samuel M. Henderson, Wilmette, Ill.

Benefit for Gads Hill Held in Highland Park

Lawn Fete With Many Attractive Features Given at the Home of Mrs. J. McGregor Adams by Number of Women.

Gads Hill can be proud of the splendid success of the lawn fete given in its honor at the home of Mrs. J. McGregor Adams. The receipts, amounting to $1,000.00, will go a long way toward making many children and tired mothers forget their hum drum existence in the crowded city tenements.

The beautiful home and grounds with their exquisite decorations were enough to make all happy, but added to this purpose for which they had assembled, the hearts of those present were made doubly glad, and money flowed freely.

Mrs. Adams and all the ladies who worked so hard to make the occasion a success deserve the thanks and compliments which Gads Hill and North Shore residents shower upon them.

Among the many booths one of the most attractive was the butterfly booth in charge of Mrs. John Glass and Miss Charlotte Yoe. It was fitted up to resemble an artist's studio, and a prize was given for the best butterfly made after the fashion of ghosts in a ghost book. Rebecca's well was in charge of Mrs. Walter Carr and Mrs. John Drum. The Japanese cottage and tent, built of bamboo and decorated with wisteria, was presided over by Mrs. Richard Pickering and Mrs. Richard Peyton in Japanese costume.

A gift tree for the children similar to a Christmas tree was in charge of Mrs. Carleton Moseley. The fancy goods booth, which was a pergola, was in charge of Mrs. W. W. Willis, Miss F. F. Drake, Miss Liza Laffin and Mrs. Robert Buckley. Mrs. Charles Buckley, Mrs. William Alexander and Mrs. Hussey sold candy in a booth built of huge sticks of peppermint candy.

An orchestra played in one corner of the veranda and in the other ice cream was sold by the following women, wearing white gowns and wreaths of pink roses in their hair: Miss Hawkins, Miss Roberts, Miss Buckley, Miss Catherine Marsh, Miss Eleanor Brown, Miss Snow, Miss Mason, Miss Ruth Gregory and Miss Lobdell.

In a gypsy camp, pitched on the site of two old Indian graves on Mrs. Adams' grounds, a real gypsy palmist told fortunes. Mrs. Pere Wickes was in charge of the fortune telling. The decorations were in charge of Fred Page.

The importance of the event justified the press photographers and reporters from Chicago being busy all afternoon and evening getting pictures and preparing copy for their papers. We have the Chicago Record-Herald to thank for the picture of the gypsies on this page.

Ravinia Park News

The patrons of Ravinia Park paid hearty tribute to the genius of Frederick Stock, when the Theodore Thomas Orchestra opened its season there Monday night. Rarely has a larger or more enthusiastic crowd been seen at the Park than that attending the opening performance of this splendid organization. The program was one of great delight, each number being enthusiastically received.

There will be but one more week of the Thomas Orchestra and the engagement, while short, promises to be a memorable one.

MISS MARGARETT ATWATER - MRS. A.L. DREY

These ladies made very charming gypsies and succeeded in contributing largely to the Gads Hill benefit. We wish we could publish a cut of all the booths with the ladies in charge, as it would make a very attractive picture. The picture at right is Mrs. A.L. Drum
