Honesty and Policy

Honesty may be the best policy, but in the case of a Philadelphia business man recently it worked out most inopportunistically, to say the least, says the Record of that city. He was in New York for a one-day trip and stopped at a big hotel for dinner. Opposite him sat a middle-aged woman, who was almost through eating when the Philadelphian began. Soon she had finished and got up to leave. Before she had gone far the Philadelphian spied on the floor a $10 bill. Seizing it he rushed over to the woman and gave it to her, explaining where he had found it. She opened her purse, counted her money and looked mystified, but nevertheless she took the proffered note with a word of thanks and put it in her purse. With a satisfied air of righteousness the Philadelphian returned to his seat and leisurely finished his dinner. When he had fully satisfied his hunger he searched for his money to pay his bill. Like many careless men he frequently carried his money loose in his pockets, instead of his wallet, and he went carefully through each pocket in turn, but with no more results than a small amount of change. He remembered looking to his money before starting on his business trip and at that time he had a $10 bill, some change and a mileage book. Then it suddenly dawned on him. The $10 bill he had given to the woman had not been hers, but his own. There he was in New York with only a few cents in his pocket and owing a good-sized bill for his dinner. The proprietor would not let him go without security, and finally he had to leave his mileage book while he went around to the business, friend whom he had come over to see, and negotiated a small loan. Next time the Philadelphian will make careful investigation before he lets his honest impulses carry him away.

A man isn't as anxious to have his wife forgive his sins as he is to have her forget them.

Took Precaution

"What! You've sold your cow to Squeers! Don't you know that that swindler never pays?"
"Hal but I've got even with him. I've charged him a sovereign too much."
—Punch.

The street faker reaps a golden harvest every time he faces a crowd that wants something for nothing.

To Quit Her

Bacon—I'm trying to get my wife to get a folding bed for herself.
Egbert—What for?
"Oh, she snores terribly, and with a folding bed I might be able to shut her up!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Some men expect St. Peter to pass them through the pearly gates because they once paid 50 cents for a 15-cent supper at a church social.

Delicate Job

Doctor—The increasing deafness of your wife is merely an indication of advancing years, and you can tell her that.
Husband—Hum! Would you mind telling her that yourself, doctor?

It takes a woman of tact to smile when her rival is praised.

High Stakes

Well, where's that cook, demanded his wife. Don't tell me she wasn't on the train. See was on the train, timidly explained the commuter, but I got to playing cards and a Lonelyville man won her.

Home, Sweet Home.

"Yes, sah," said Brother Dickey, "mah race what wants to lib in Illinois kin go dar, how an' w'en dey likes, but ez fer me, I'll stav whar I is—mongst de folks I'ze bo'n an' raised wid, an' if I is lynched, please God, I'll be lynched by my fr'en's."

One's wife never gets mad when he finds fault with the meals—if they live at a boarding house.

An Unkind Wish.

Pupil—Mother's compliments, sir, and she wishes me to stay away from school tomorrow for a funeral.
Master—O, is one of your near relatives dead, then?
Pupil—No sir, only a cousin of my aunt.
Well, this time you can go, but I had much rather it had been a nearer relative.

Breathes There a Man

Breathes there a man with a soul so dead who, when outdoors he pokes his head on days like these, says not, I wish I had the time to take a fish.
Oh, yes; I know a chap who is so blooming lazy that, gee whiz, he has no fond desire to roam, but drinks the "bate" and stays at home.

When a man is compelled to eat his words his appetite is quickly satisfied.

Across the gray November sky
The ragged clouds are sliding,
And from the pasture near we hear
The foolish braves colliding.
In spiral blue the smoke ascends,
The barns are filled with plenty,
The half-back skirts the struggling ends
And makes a gain of twenty.

A woman is able to stand all the prosperity a man can bring home.

Mr. Green's Waterloo.

Mr. Green had been paying four dollars a week for board; his appetite constantly increasing. Finally his landlady saw that she must either sell out and quit or raise her boarder's rate. One day, after watching him feverishly devouring plateful after plateful, she plucked up courage, and said:
Mr. Green I shall have to raise your board to five dollars.
Mr. Green looked up with a start, then in a tone of consternation he said: "Oh, Mrs. Small, don't! It's as much as I can do now to eat four dollars' worth."

A waitress in an Omaha restaurant married a guest an hour after she served his dinner. Her haste was due to the fact that she did not care to wait any longer.

Truth and trouble play no favorites.
