OF YOUR PICTURE

It requires expert knowledge and artistic temperament to properly frame pictures. Any good carpenter can make and ut together a frame, but few know what kind of a frame to use for the particular picture to be framed. This is where mechanical knowledge ends and the exercise of artistic intuition begins.

> Many a Good Picture Is Absolutely Ruined In Selecting a Frame

Our picture framers know their business. They have the material to so frame a picture as to get the highest possible artistic effect. No incongruous contrast or unpleasant effects if we do the framing. If you are in doubt as to the character of frame you need for a picture you contemplate framing, come in and ask our picture framer. He can give you the BEST STOCK, BEST WORK, BEST EFFECT and the BEST PRICE of anybody in the city.

A LITTORAL DEFENSE CORPS.

Recent developments suggest the thought that the time may have a rived for the creation of a littoral defense corps as a distinct branch of military establishment. The trength of the movement to exclude the marines from naval vessels and confine their functions to the guarding of navy yards and bases seems to have became apparent even to the marines themselves, says the New York Tribune. The Tribune's Washington bureau reports that the comnissioned personnel of the marine orps seriously contemplates asking congress to transfer the entire corps to the army, with the hope of finding there more congenial surroundings. Gen. Murray, chief of artillery, after an extended inspection of the coast defenses, announces the necessity of an additional force to guard "the back doors" of the modern fortifications and those portions of the coast be ond the reach of the fortified ordnance. The amalgamation of the marine and coast defense corps in a littoral defense corps might solve all the difficulties. The marines under such an arrangement would retain suffi-cient mobility to enable them to guard Sunday School—12:00 noon. naval bases, the rear approaches to the fortifications and unfortified portions of the littoral, while-practically the entire supervision of that important branch of defense could be confined to a single head of the newly created corps, who in turn could made responsible to either the secretary of the navy or the secretary of war, as circumstances might dictate.

Coaling seems to be destined to become a matter of vital importance to warships, not only because of the absolute necessity of the fuel, but because of the dangers which have been reyealed by the fact that high explosives have been found in a number of instances, of late, in the coal for the bunkers of British war vessels. Unless coal supplies are closely guarded night and day, and every bushel put aboard is closely inspected, it would be comparatively easy to destroy the mightiest of ships with sticks of explosive properly adjusted in lumps of the fuel. This danger has received more or less consideration during times of war, but never in days of peaceful service have ships been menaced as British cruisers and battleships seem to be at the present time.

The virulent outbreak of corruption in Montreal is of special interest to Americans as proving that municipal graft is not limited in its extent by national boundary lines. Canada has an admirable federal government, supeior in some respects to our own, and the late development of the country's institutions has permitted the Holy Communion, 7:30 a. m. rulers of the Dominion to heed many a lesson taught by American experience. But the case of Montreal indicates that, with Canada's rapidly increasing population and wealth, the misrule and looting of cities may easfly distinguish the future development

Automobile manufacturers in America have for two years contended that racing pays and they have supported the : belief to such an extent that from twenty-five to thirty road races a season are contested. It is gratifying to the Americans to have the foreign manufacturers decide that next year will see a "enewal of the French Grand Prix, a classic international in character and considered the greatest automobile contest of the world.
