Good Work

A word of commendation is due to our road commissioner as to the sidewalks during this unusual winter weather.

Too Much Money

The following editorial in the Waukegan Gazette of Tuesday, January 11, is a timely word of warning:

Nathaniel Moore, son of J. Hobart Moore, who controls the Rock Island railroad, the National Biscuit company, the Diamond Match company and other big concerns, was given $100,000 on his 21st birthday and later his father gave him $750,000.

Sunday the young man was found dead in a room in a levee resort in Chicago and it develops he had been a frequenter of the levee for a long time and spent money as if it were water.

His father gave him too much money!

Had he not had the time, the money, etc., to satisfy his whims, he would likely today be occupying a position of influence rather than have brought the disgrace upon his family.

We repeat it—his father gave him too much money; the boy was burdened with gold.

Lucky is the young man who starts out life without such an affliction.

If some of the millions now being expended in preparation for wars that will never come, were devoted to the making of good roads and improving inland waterways, our vast population would be better housed and better fed, says the Farm Journal.

The horse is in no more peril of extinction by the automobile than he is of being driven into oblivion by the airship.

Pigeons in History

Doubleless you admire the pretty, graceful creatures that perch upon the eaves of your house, or daintily trip across your yard, but did you ever think what a factor they have been in the history of the world?

Deluge covered the face of the earth, when the faithful dove flew from the hand of Noah and returned to her master, bearing the significant olive branch.

During the fifth Egyptian dynasty, three thousand years before Christ, it was the fashion to domesticate pigeons, and to train them as carriers and messengers.

The price of a handsome pair of pigeons in ancient Rome was not a trifle, for Axius, a Roman knight, once sold a pair of pigeons for forty denarii—about thirteen pounds in English money, and about sixty-five dollars in our currency.

Among the many pathetic incidents connected with the imprisonment of Mary Queen of Scots, she begs earnestly for a pigeon, and writes in a letter: "I beg you to procure for me some pigeons. I wish to rear them in cages; it will be such a pastime for a prisoner."

In Childhood's Realm

He's generous, is my baby boy, And freely gives from out his store Of things imaginary.

With serious face he thinks awhile, Then quickly dives his little hand Into his store remaining.

And hands me "something" with a smile— The sweetest in the whole broad land— His laughter scarce restraining.

I make believe, with gracious tact, 'Tis something good for me to eat, And show appreciation:

With changing mood he stays my act, His large brown eyes then me entreat With sudden consternation.

He quickly turns with anxious haste, And stays me from a sad mistake: "Don't eat it, it's a penny."

Regretful, I forego a taste Of what I thought he'd have me take From out his treasures many.

My sorrow must not, shall not stay; His puckered brow seems lost to sight: "Neath hair so light and wavy: An instant's thought—he sees the way To help me from my awkward plight: "Yes, eat it now, it's gravy!"

The Cheates

"Alias Jimmy Valentine."

The Christmas night opening at the Studebaker was a veritable Yule-tide affair and Kris Kringle never left a more satisfactory present. Both the theatre and the management of the play can have Christmas rejoicing the year round for H. B. Warner's new offering, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," will be delighting just as many happy theatre-goers this time next year.

Turning The Tables

He was a terribly "short man," but he knew a real live business woman when he saw her. She was applying for a situation as confidential clerk and typist, and he turned upon her a rapid fire of questions:

"Talk slang." "No sir." "Know how to spell eat and dog correctly?" "Yes, sir." "Use the telephone every other minute." "No, sir." "Usually tell everybody in the office how much the firm owes and all the rest of the private business you learn." "No, sir."

He was thinking of something else to ask her when she took a hand in the matter and put a few queries: "Smoke cigars when you're dictating." "Why—er—no!" he gasped in astonishment.

"Sfam things about when business is bad?" "No." "Think you know enough about grammar and punctuation to appreciate a good typist when you get one?" "I—I think so."

"Want me to go to work, or is your time worth so little that?" He interrupted her enthusiastically.

"Kindly hang up your things and let's get at these letters."—Tit-Bits.

A young woman from the city had been staying on a ranch up in the cattle-country for a few weeks. Seeing some calves running across a pasture, she exclaimed, "Oh! what pretty cow-lets."

What Fell

"Didn't I hear something fall in the kitchen a few minutes ago, Katie?" "Yes, mum." "I hope you didn't break anything, Katie?" "Only one leg and a part of the wing of the roast duck!"

Suggestion.

Designing Female (consolingly)—There is always one remedy for a broken heart, major. The Major (recently a widower)—And what is that? Designing Female—Re-pairing!

Anticipating

"This is what others are wearing, madame." "But I don't want to wear what others are wearing. Show me the style after next."

Mrs. Jones—This milk looks suspiciously blue. Dealer—Madam, my cows were raised in the blue-grass region of old Kentucky.—Woman's Journal.

"Off His Feed."

Diner (to his neighbor after having three helpings of fish and meat)—I've got no appetite to-night. Neighbor—You hide it very well, then.

No Novelty.

Old Lady (in a shoe shop)—Have you felt slippers? Small Boy Assistant (solemnly)—Yes ma'am, many a time.

An Expert.

"Do you know what to do if the car should break down?" asked the thoughtful mother of the young man who was going to take her daughter out in his new Napier.

"Certainly," he answered. The young people were quite late in returning. The fair young daughter rushed into her mother and said: "Oh, mamma, the car had broken down! But Jack knew exactly what to do! We—we are engaged."

He'll Be a Lady Killer.

"Why did she name her little boy 'Bargain'?" She wants everyone to love him.—Houston Post.

Mature Fulfillment.

"When he first grew up he always wanted people running after him."

"Did he gain his wish?" "Oh, yes; only the first time I heard of him the people who were running after him were the police."—Baltimore American.

"The duke and his finance don't speak."

"Just a lover's spat, no doubt." "No. This is most serious. Their lawyers have quarreled."
