Trifles That Make History

"Nothing impresses me more than the little things which have made history," says Senator Chauncey M. Depew. "Of course, the time must be ripe and the electric wires connected with the machinery in order that the push of the button may start the revolution. A veteran English diplomat with whom I was dining said that when the sovereigns of Europe after the revolutions of '48 were looking for a king for Denmark they were surrounded by a group of officers. Among them was the handsomest man of his time, a young German prince.

"While the question of dynasties, successions and relationships was going on the emperor of Russia, himself a fine-looking specimen of humanity, was so enraptured by the appearance of this young officer that he turned suddenly to the confederate sovereigns and said: 'Let us select Prince Christian.'

"The suggestion was adopted. Prince Christian became not only king of Denmark, but the grandfather or father of most of the sovereigns of Europe, present and prospective. The king of Greece is his son, the czar of Russia and the prince of Wales, the future king of England, his grandsons."

Gross Materialism

The teacher notes that rain is falling outdoors, and thinks to awaken the poetic impulses of the children by asking:

"Now, children, although the rain is pattering against the windows and makes the day dark and dreary at this moment, we should look ahead. What does the rain coax into being along the roads and throughout the country?" "Mud," asserts the red-headed boy in the back seat.

Makes Him Popular.

"There goes Perkins, the popular poet."

"I never heard of him. What makes him popular?"

"He never insists upon reciting his verses at dinners or to his friends."

It is estimated that there are always 4,000,000 people at sea—and ten times that number "up in the air."
