Mark Twain

BY W. C. MCKENZIE.

The Pilots call came calm and clear, On from the river's farther shore;; The latest bar is safely crossed. The pilot's trip is o'er. O heart, by human sorrow tried, O body, racked by pain, Genial mirth was still thy guide, Our kindly, lovable Mark Twain.

Through the false glare of frail deceit, Through more exteral show, To pierce our foibles and conceits And show the human heart below, Was the mission of thy pen. To the world thy life was gain To millions of despairing men Thou gavest pleasure, softened pain.

The world has need of such as thee. To teach the worth of honesty, To make us from conventions free, That honest men may bear the gree; To welcome laughter, dry our tears To cherish hopes and banish fears To remember pleasure, forget the pain, And strine as thou, heroic Twain.

Highland Park "Improvers" Brave Showers; Other Events Postponed.

Numerous celebrations which had been plan ned for Arbor Day in towns along the north shore had to be postponed on account of the storm that swept across this section of the country. A committee of women from the Highland Park, Improvement Association braved the danger of a drenching. One hundred and fifty shrubs were planted in various spots in the city. This committee composed of the association, Mrs. Thomas Clements, Mrs. J. Porter Smith and Mrs. Marshall Sampsell surrounded the fountain in Central avenue near Sheridan road with shrubs and also visited the two parks and planted shrubs along the parkways.
