DESIGN FOR A COBBLESTONE FRONT

Design 982, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

Copyright, 1912, by Glenn L. Saxton.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

This plan is of the bungalow type run up two stories. It has a living room across the entire front, a good sized den and combination stairway. Second story has three chambers and a sleeping porch. There is a full basement under the entire house. First story, nine feet second story, eight feet. Size 26 by 28 feet over main part. Cost to build exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,700.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply Saxton's book of plans, entitled "American Dwellings." It contains 254 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

Complexion. Women in the middle class of life, who live more simply and eat plainer, simpler and more wholesome food, often have much finer complexions and do not seem to grow sallow and faded so soon. Their habit of going to bed early and getting up early and getting the health giving morning air also makes a fresher, clearer complexion.

One cannot eat and dress as one pleases, regardless of rules of health, and have a pretty complexion. One must live as nature says is best if one wishes to be beautiful and healthy. It is said that carrots are very good for the complexion, and if properly cooked they are very good to eat.

Water Waves and Curling Irons. Beyond a doubt hot irons are the shortest and least difficult of the routes to wavy hair. The straight haired girl will suffer no harmful effects by resorting to the iron at long intervals, but if she wishes to keep her hair a crown of glory she will use the hot iron sparingly indeed.

Safer and more natural is the water wave. This lasts well on some hair, even on straight hair, while with other girls it is not successful. Failure is usually due to oil in the hair. The hair is wet and brushed back flat to the head. It is then pushed out from the forehead with a comb for about an inch and held in place with small hairpins. This is repeated until the entire face is circled. Then another section of the hair is combed up and again pinned in place, the process being repeated until the entire head is covered with a series of little ridges.

For the Water Trip. Before taking a trip on the water apply to the face a thin mask of cold cream dusted over with powder. Be careful not to rub the mask off during the trip. Immediately upon your return remove the powder and cream with a lotion containing a dissolving agent. Soap and water are a mistake, as they add to the irritation resulting from tan and sunburn. After several applications of the astringent, for which a small sponge should be used, pat the skin dry with a soft cloth, but do not rub it. Later make a second application of a good skin food.

COMEDY IN A BOOKSTORE.
Queer Experience in an Attempt to Buy a Rare Work.
A correspondent of the Glasgow Herald contributes the following amusing account of an attempt to buy a rare book:
In his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" Oliver Wendell Holmes mentions a curious book called "Thinks I to Myself" as having been written and published in England by a person of quality about the beginning of the last century, some time ago, among a number of secondhand books exposed for sale outside a shop in Glasgow. I noticed one in elegant but faded binding. It was "Thinks I to Myself," in two thin volumes. The first sentence took my fancy: "I was born of very worthy, honest and respectable parents—at least I think so!"

I went into the shop with the volumes and asked the old man of the interior. "What is the value of these?" He turned them over carelessly and said: "These are of no use to me, they're just so much waste paper. This struck me as an original way of spelling books, and I grave'y responded: "Very well—how much for them, then?" "Three halfpence," he said. "Per volume?" I asked. "For the two," he replied, whereupon I put the books into my pocket and handed him the money.
He looked at me wonderingly and inquired, "Where did you get them?" "Outside, at the door." "Why," he gasped, "I thought you were selling them!"

MOST HUMAN OF BIRDS.
Not Only in Talking, but in Eating, the Parrot Imitates Man.
It is not only in imitating human speech that the parrot excels most of the birds. The parrot is alone among birds in taking food in its claws. With these two characteristics it makes more or less use of that which distinguishes humanity from the rest of the animal kingdom—the hand and the larynx.
The monkey uses its hands and the elephant its trunk in feeding. Various animals have a habit of pawing their food. Rodents have servicable teeth. Still, the parrot is pre-eminent among birds in this regard. The secretary bird is said to attack reptiles with its claws, and some observers have said that owls make partial use of their remarkably flexible perching toe somewhat more than does a hen in scratching for food. However, there is no other bird which, when given a piece of food, will accept it in its claws.
Parrots, of course, do not talk, and we use the word in their wild state and are not known to be imitative of neighboring sounds nor to possess the repertory of the mocking bird. It is therefore a question whether or not their use of the claws is largely imitative also. The shape of the parrot's beak would indicate that some assistance in eating has always been a part of the bird's characteristics.
Like man, the parrot makes its appearance in the world naked and helpless.—Harper's Weekly.
A Subsidy.
"I see so much in the newspaper's about subsidies. What does a subsidy mean, Frank?"
"A subsidy, Grace, is where I give you $25 for going to see your mother instead of having her come to see you."
—Judge.

Milady's Mirror

For Malodorous Perspiration.
Certain parts of the body perspire more than others, and often there is a very offensive odor. Absolute cleanliness is the best safeguard against such a misfortune, not only for the body itself, but for the clothing. A silk bodice saturated over and over again with perspiration becomes too offensive to be worn, as those who have to sit in street cars and crowd into shops very well know. The better way is to wear only washable goods in hot weather and use fresh shields every day, even if one must stay up half an hour to wash them, and take an extra few moments to insert them.
Many times such a condition comes about from the lack of thorough rinsing after using soap. Any remaining particles soon decompose; hence the odor.
After the bath, and it may be needed two or three times a day, a good cologne should be applied to the under-clothing, while the wet wash cloth should have a little toilet ammonia poured on it and the parts wiped well. Salicylic soap may be used to wash the shields. A cake costs but a dime or maybe two at the drug store. Have an ounce of boric acid and the same of salicylic acid in powder and dust with this before putting on the garments.

When the shields are to be replaced drench them with cologne. There is a great deal of rectified spirits in cologne that helps in such cases.
Where the head perspires too much the usual remedy is to shampoo too often, so the roots of the hair rot, just as will the roots of a plant that is watered too much. The very best and surely the easiest method is to let the hair hang and dry out the perspiration. A dry shampoo must of necessity be used where a woman has to spend her days in an office. She can fill the head with a mixture of very finely sifted corn-meal and powdered orris root at night, equal parts, let it stay until morning and then give the thorough brushing that will require an extra half hour. On holidays, Sundays and at night when possible the hair should be aired and a regular shampoo only once in a couple of weeks given.
There is brushing and brushing, and the right way is to hold the hair out from the head and pass the brush through each tress from the scalp to the ends with long, steady strokes. The brushing should be felt only pleasantly on the scalp, not a sort of "banging," but just enough to stimulate the glands to secrete the oil instead of its running through the long hair. After a shampoo use a little cologne with massage on the scalp and always loosen and brush the hair at bedtime.
To Have Clear Skin.
A French physician says the woman who would have a beautiful complexion must live plainly, avoiding rich meats, greasy soups, too much game, heavy wines and highly seasoned food. Wealthy people who live highly and dress improperly often have fine features which are marred by a miserable
