THE FLAG AFLOAT.

Intricate Etiquette of the Stars and Stripes in the Navy.
The etiquette of the stars and stripes about United States naval ships is almost hopelessly intricate to outsiders, writes Katherine E. Thomas in Joe Chaplin's News-Letter. Rigid ruling of life aboard ship requires every officer or man on reaching or leaving the quarter deck formally to salute the national ensign, which salute must be as formally returned by the officers of the watch at hand.
All officers and men, however, must stand at attention whenever the "Star Spangled Banner" is played unless engaged at the time in some duty that absolutely prohibits their doing so. This respect must be paid to the national air of any country when an official representative of that country is aboard ship. Nor does the courtesy cease at this, for at morning and evening colors at pulling boats when passing near a foreign man of war must lie on their oars, and the coxswain salutes, standing to face the colors in his salute, and seamen must stop their engines.
When a foreign ship of war enters a harbor or passes a fortification it is customary to hoist at the main the flag of the country whose waters it visits and to salute it, and the nearest fort or battery returns the salute. When a foreign warship is in United States waters, and fires such a salute it is returned exclusively by the nearest battery. The United States ships remaining silent.
Under no circumstances is a salute permitted from a United States vessel in honor of any nation or any official of a nation not formally recognized by the government of the United States, and no ship of the navy is permitted to lower her sails or dip her ensign unless to return a courtesy. On the other hand, when passing or being passed by a foreign ship of war at close range all officers and men on deck are required to salute the foreign flags and the sentries to present arms.

BURNS IN THE RAIN.

Proper Way to Build a Campfire in Stormy Weather.
There are several ways of building a campfire that an ordinary rain will not put out. This is one:
Lay two sticks on the ground parallel with each other and from two to four times as far apart as the diameters of the sticks. Across these two lay two more, as if you were starting a cob house. If necessary drive stakes into the ground to keep the sticks in place.
For the next story of the cob house use only one stick and place that on the side on which you are to be when the fire is burning. These five sticks may be green. Dry wood makes a better fire but it needs rebuilding sooner.
Roof over the cob house with any kind of dry wood. The harder the rain the more they will have to be if this roof is to shed the water. Each stick of the roof should rest on the back log and on the last—the fifth—stick of the cob house and be kept in place by the side sticks.
Fill the inside of the house with kindlings and set fire to them. The roof will burn on the under side, where the heat of the fire keeps it dry. As each stick burns through it falls into the fire that fills the interior of the cob house. The camper watches the fire and cooks through the opening between the fore stick and the open stick that supports the roof. He also feeds hands and small kindlings through this opening, but puts the large sticks on the roof.
It is surprising to see in how hard a rain this kind of fire will burn—Youth's Companion.

Play Filled With Laughs at Olympic.

Chicago
A comedy which trembles with laughter from curtain rise to curtain fall is "Putting It Over," the Lee Arthur and Frank Hatch play, which is entering upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theatre.

"PUTTING IT OVER" A GOOD COMEDY

The plot revolves about Amos Sterling, who is the guardian of the fortune of his ward, Ruth Noel. His son, Ross Sterling, becomes involved in a midnight quarrel with a college mate, because the latter attacks Miss Noel's character. To save his son from prosecution, the father utilizes the trust funds. The son in turn, unaware of his father's sacrifice, forsakes the law, his chosen calling, to play professional ball, and thereby prevents his father's financial ruin. Eventually he wins the heart of Miss Noel and the happy ending is signalized at the close of the championship game, in which Ross Sterling, the college athlete, is victorious. The championship battle is decided in the third act and in that scene the audience is treated to the shouts of the baseball fans, accompanied with all the excitement attending the decisive game.
Edwin Holt, a seasoned actor, who has played many principal roles in recent successes and who has won laurels for himself on the vaudeville stage, plays the part of Amos Sterling, the father, while Harold Vosburgh, who last season played in Belasco's "The Woman," plays the son. Miss Helen Holmes is the amiable Ruth Noel; Alison Skipworth portrays the part of Mrs. Stone, Ruth's aunt, and Miss Veda Steele, a young woman possessing great charm, plays the sleepy Miss Agatha Findley, whose affliction does not prevent her from making the best catch of the season.

The Difference.

"When a man talks a great deal what is he called?"
"An orator, my boy."
"And when a woman talks a good deal what is she called?"
"A nuisance"—Yonkers Statesman.

"Tommy, did you wash your hands this morning?"
"I washed one of them, mother. The other didn't need it."—Life.

Ravinia Park Notes

On Thursday afternoon the theatre was filled with an expectant audience, mostly children, by half after two o'clock when the curtain arose and Professor Henry Roethig, a talented magician, performed many wonderfully impressive tricks. Following this vaudeville Gustav Hiarichs and the orchestra presented an excellent program. In one of the songs were Mrs. F. R. McMullin's children and several of their friends who were accompanied by their Japanese maid in native costume. They were pretty and picturesque and caused a great amount of interest among the little folks who were sitting near.

Today Jane Abercrombie, Lou Kreidler and Henry Baron of the Ravinia Opera Company, at half after two o'clock, will sing the songs of our early youth. It is "an afternoon of recollections" and will be of equal enjoyment to young and old.
Among those seen in the boxes during last week were: On Wednesday night the presentation of "La Boheme," Mrs. Charles T. Boynton, Miss Boynton, Miss Ruth Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. J. Perry Smith, Mrs. Oscar Woodruff, Miss Dr. Miss Sadie Buckley, Miss Elizabeth Buckley, Mrs. F. R. McMullin. On Friday night there was a well filled house at the presentation of "The Bridal Scene" from Wagner's opera, "Lohengrin" in which Jane Abercrombie as Elsa and Henry Baron as Lohengrin, won great applause. In the boxes were Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Boynton, Miss Boynton and Mrs. C. W. Buckley; Mrs. F. R. McMullin, Miss Buckley, and J. C. McMullin.

ALASKA PROVES INTERESTING TOPIC

Presbyterian Missionary Society Discusses Work in Far North

The member of the Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church held their monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon in the Church parlors. The principal speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Alice Davidson who gave an interesting address upon the "Historical and Spiritual Side of Alaska." She outlined briefly the history of Alaska since the discovery of that country by the Russians in 1666 of the purchase of Alaska by the United States in 1867 when William H. Seward was Secretary of State and of the work among the natives by Sheldon Jackson. Of great interest was Miss Davidson's account of the problems of the religious workers who found it almost impossible to civilize or christianize the people because of the neglect of the United States to furnish a proper government between 1867 and 1884. The many Christian Communities that have been established and the gradual dying out of the old superstitious religions were mentioned. Other speakers of the afternoon were: Mrs. Abbie Bastin who gave a map talk, Mrs. Frederick Clow who told of "Educational Features of Work in Alaska," and Mrs. H. B. Roberts gave several biographical sketches. Miss Mary Sedgwick gave an interpretive reading of the poem "The Cry of the Alaskan Children." The Hostesses were Mesdames H. P. Davidson, William Millard, Henry Boyd and George G. Greene.
