COURTSHIP IN SPAIN.

A Difficult Business in Which Speaking Tubes Play a Part.

In Spain, as is well known, a rigorous etiquette governs the business of love-making. A young man cannot interview his sweetheart without her parents' consent, and indeed all conversation openly carried on between the couple must be in the presence of the fair one's mother.

Many subtleties are adopted by the lovers to overcome this difficulty, and the "reja"—the ornamental ironwork on the windows of Spanish houses—has become one of the favorite trysting places. Modern life, however, has imposed fresh barriers. If a young man's sweetheart lives on the third floor of a city building he cannot very well meet her at the "reja."

In this as in other spheres of life necessity is the mother of invention, and some ardent lovers have brought speaking tubes to their assistance. The seniorita, at the appointed hour, lowers this to her lover below, and they are thus able to carry on their love affairs with the assurance that they are not overheard by the people on the intervening flats, as would be the case if the conversation were carried on without such aid.—London Answers.

Thackeray's Favorite Books.

In her introduction to the "Roundabout Papers" in the centenary edition of Thackeray, Lady Ritchie speaks of her father's favorite books. Thackeray had an old Montaigne, which he always kept on the table by his bed. He had a second copy, still older, bound in white vellum, on the book shelves in his study. Lady Ritchie cannot remember that he had any particular feeling for special editions. "He used a cheap, battered one now worn with noble columns, the companion with whom, as he said, he could have been quite content to dwell for a year upon that problematical desert island. He loved his "Don Quixote." He also liked his shabby, worm eaten copy of Johnson's poets. They had been to India and back, and bookworms are very common out there." Milton's sonnet to Shakespeare in Johnson's poets was, Lady Ritchie adds, one of the last things Thackeray ever read.

Learning His Father's Business.
"What?" exclaimed the wealthy Cleveland papa who had put his son to work in order to teach him a few things. "What? Fired after working one week?"

"Yes, dad; I was discharged."

"What was the trouble?"

"They said I was too green for them."

"What was your mistake?"

"I paid a bill the first time the collector called!"

"Aha! And now you see how foolish you were?"

"Yes, dad. I'll never do it again."

"My son, you have served your apprenticeship and learned your lesson. You may now come into the office with me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Needed Them All.
A well known authoress was once talking with a dilapidated bachelor, who retained little but his combs.

"It is time now," he said pompously "for me to settle down as a married man, but I want so much. I want youth, health, wealth, of course; beauty, grace."

"Yes," said his fair listener sympathetically, "you poor man, you do want them all."

Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,150.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply Saxton's book of plans entitled "American Dwellings." It contains 254 new and up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $8,000.

THE CLOCK OF DEATH.

It Was the First Astronomical Timepiece Made in England.

The clock at Hampton court palace derived its unpleasant title by reason of a superstition that whenever any one long resident in the palace dies the clock immediately stops. It is of record that when Anne of Denmark, the queen of James I., died the old timepiece was striking four and that it stopped almost before the last stroke sounded. So rare that time it is said to have repeated this grisly proceeding each time a royal personage within its jurisdiction died.

At any rate, the clock has an interesting history quite aside from this. It was the first astronomical timepiece made in England, being constructed in 1540 for Henry VIII. Thirty-two years ago it was brought out of a shed where it had lain neglected for nearly half a century, and by order of the then secretary of the office of works it was re-erected in the courtyard opposite the entrance to the state apartments. There is historical evidence to the effect that it was built by one Nicholas Cratzer, a German astronomer who came to England at the invitation of Cardinal Wolsey.

This old timepiece tells the hour, the month, the day of the month, the position of the sun and the number of days since the beginning of the year, the phases of the moon and its age, the hour at which it crosses the meridian and the time of high water at London bridge. The time required to wind it is half an hour every week. The weights have a descent of over sixty feet.—Harper's.

THE VANISHING SEA COW.

A Marine Curiosity That Is Rapidly Needing Extinction.

One of the largest fish that has inhabited the waters of the gulf of Mexico and the south Atlantic coast of this country and which is almost extinct is known as the manatee. It was found in great numbers a century ago, and even a few years back this creature was quite plentiful in certain localities.

It is very gentle for a large fish and easily captured in heavy nets, which are usually stretched across the mouths of rivers emptying into the south Atlantic or the gulf of Mexico. The flesh is very delicious and brings a high price, having a strong resemblance to the very finest veal. The skeleton is valued at $100, and the skin if removed properly and cared for by those who understand its properties will bring a like amount.

This fish is often from ten to twelve feet in length and weighs about 2,000 pounds. It is so gentle it will not strike the light craft that happens to be near it, and when captured it shows no resistance whatever.

It is safe to say that in the next quarter of a century this creature will become extinct unless specimens are preserved simply to prevent the complete loss of one of our most wonderful sea creatures.

It lives wholly on salt water vegetation and growths found in the mouths of the rivers emptying into the sea.—New York World.

The Spell of London.

The greatest of modern French poets, Paul Verlaine, fell instantly under the spell of London, even though he came to it as an exile to earn a wretched living as a teacher of French. "As a whole," he wrote, "it is very unexpected and a hundred times more amusing than Italy or Paris or the banks of the Rhine." And again: "The docks are wonderful—Carthage, Tyre, all rolled into one." He deplored the lack of clean cafes, but nevertheless, "No matter, this incredible town is very well, black as a crow and noisy as a duck." In Verlaine's view London had no monuments except the docks. He ignored Westminster, the Tower and all the sights. For him they do not seem to have existed.—London Chronicle.

Tuppence Saved.

McAndrews (the chemist at 2 a. m.)—Two pennyworth of bicarbonate of soda for the wife's indigestion at this time o' night when a glass of hot water does just as well. Sandy (hastily)—Weel, weel, thanks for the advice! I'll no bother ye after all. Good night!—Pearson's.

Well Worth It.

As dentists know very well that people do not call upon them merely for pleasure, they are not likely to be offended at this bit from the Washington Star:

"Didn't that man complain when you charged him for a broken appointment?"

"No," replied the dentist. "He said breaking an appointment with me is worth every cent it costs."

That New Woods Is Beautiful!

Men and women select their electric for different reasons. We've told the men about the improved batteries, which will give greater Mileage than ever; the improved motor of high speed; the solid rubber cushion tires, which simply can't be punctured; the easy-riding Woods Springs, which absorb every bump and jolt of the road; the hundred and one other points of mechanical superiority. So now a word to the ladies.

The body design of the newest Woods is Swartness itself. Its dashing and trim and Frenchy contour is a joy to the artistic eye. Not can the most cultured or refined taste find a single fault with the luxurious interior equipment or its many satisfying conveniences. The body is close to the ground, making the step to and from the car simple and safe in spite of the hobblest hobbler skirt ever devised. There's no dirt or grease within reach of your gown—in fact there's nothing to do but to enjoy the ride. Let us demonstrate! The catalog of 1913 models is ready. Be sure and get a copy.
