Chicago AA Portland Cement is not a new product

Some people seem to think that any kind of a soil of a sandy nature mixed with a small percentage of Portland Cement ought to make perfect concrete. Portland Cement has performed and will perform wonders but it will not make stone from dirt.

Call for a Copy of our Free Booklet entitled "Cement, Sand and Gravel for Concrete"—tells how to select the materials for making concrete.

It has been on the market for fourteen years. The same raw materials, taken from the same quarries, have always been used in its manufacture, and the process supervised by practically the same men. Hence the unvarying quality of the

FELINE L. L. E. S.

Delicate Sensitive Hairs That Record the Slightest Touch.

We are apt to think that the cat's ability to see in the dark is due entirely to its eyes, but competent authority assures us that the feline's power in this respect is due almost as much to its whiskers.

These delicate hairs that project from the muzzle of the cat family are wonderful mechanisms. Each one grows from a follicle, or gland, nerved to the utmost sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is instantly felt by the animal, though the hair itself may be tough and insensible. The exaggerated whiskers on the muzzle often project to such a distance that from point to point they indicate the exact width of the body of the beast.

Consider the lion stealing through the jungle at night in search of prey, when the least stir of a twig gives alarm. The lion's whiskers indicate, through the finest nerves, any object that may be in his path. A touch stops him short before pushing through some close thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would betray his presence. Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the vibrissae there his body may pass noiselessly. It is the aid given him by his whiskers, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to proceed as silently as a snake.—Harper's Weekly.

A MAGIC MIRROR.

Experiments With the Moon and Stars and a Hand Glass.

A pretty experiment can be made with a hand mirror any night when there is a full moon. Hold the mirror so that the moon's image will be seen in it and you will be surprised to see four moons instead of one. One moon will be very bright, but the other three will be in a straight line and quite dull, one dull image on the side of the bright moon and the other two on the other side. Turn the mirror round slowly, still holding its face to the moon, and the reflections will seem to revolve round a common center.

You can make the same experiment with one of the very bright stars, such as Sirius, Venus or Jupiter, but with these there will be three images instead of four, as the number seen depends on the breadth of the object. The explanation is quite simple. There are two surfaces in the mirror, one in front and the other where the quicksilver is. The brightest reflection comes from the object itself, the others are what are known as secondary images reflected from the front to the back of the mirror and thence to the eye. The magic mirror never fails to excite a good deal of wonder, and is an interesting experiment as well.—London Chronicle.

Lovely Landscape.

George IV. on one occasion casually entered a private apartment at Windsor castle and encountered, somewhat to his surprise, his valet, who was seated at a table loaded with viands and eating with great avidity.

"Ah!" exclaimed the king, "I was always fond of scenery, and here is a lovely piece of landscape spread out before me."

The valet smiled feebly, but politely intimated that he did not understand the king's allusion to landscape and scenery.

"Why," replied the first gentleman of Europe, "do I not see before me a smiling valet with a magnificent gorge?"

The valet thereupon rose and retired, excusing himself to the king on the ground that he had turned suddenly "hill."—London Tit-Bits.

"THE MAN HIGHER UP"

New play of American Politics to Open at Olympic Sunday

"The Man Higher Up," a new American play in four acts, by Edith Ellis, based on Henry R. Miller's novel of the same name will have its metropolitan premiere at the Olympic Theatre on Sunday evening September 15. Jos. M. Gaites has given the piece a splendid production and the cast he has selected is an excellent one. Among the prominent players are Janet Beachler, for two seasons leading woman in David Belasco's production of "The Concert," Edward E. Ellis, the original "Blackie Daw" of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," Francis Byrne, formerly leading man with Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," George W. Wilson, Albert Perry, Eugene O'Rourke, George Parker, Edgar Norris, Richard Malchion, Frank S. Bixby, Aubrey Noyes, George Schillinger, Gerome Gaylord, Harry Gwynette, Mary Bertrand, Grace Henderson, Kate Jepsen, and Ada Gifford.

While the theme of "The Man Higher Up" is, of course, of a political nature, it is said to be treated in an entirely original manner; in fact, the play is more of a romance of present-day politics rather than an analytical discussion of a political situation. The play contains a story of strength and power, vigor and virility, with an appeal of equal force to men and women. In Mr. Miller's novel, Bob McAdoo is an imposing and winning character and so he is in the play. It is a story of a life full of action, conflict and strife and McAdoo's love for Eleanor Sanger is heart stirring in its intense reality.

SHIPS AS THEY SINK.

Their Trip to the Bottom and What Happens Afterward.

What becomes of the ship that sinks in mid-ocean? If it is of wood it takes, in the first place, considerable time for it to reach the bottom. In a hundred or more fathoms of water a quarter of an hour will elapse before the ship reaches bottom. It sinks slowly, and when the bottom is reached it falls gently into the soft, oozy bed, with no crash or breaking.

Of course if it is laden with pig iron or corresponding substances or if it is an iron ship it sinks rapidly and sometimes strikes the bottom with such force as to smash in pieces. Once sanken a ship becomes the prey of the countless inhabitants of the ocean. They swarm over and through the wreck and make it their home. Besides this they cover every inch of the boat with a thick layer of lime. This takes time, of course, and when one generation dies another continues the work until finally the ship is so laden with heavy incrustations, corals, sponges and barnacles that if wood the creating timbers fall apart and slowly but surely are absorbed in the waste at the sea bottom.

Iron vessels are demolished more quickly than those of wood, which may last for centuries. The only metals that withstand the chemical action of the waves are gold and platinum, and glass also seems unaffected. No matter how long gold may be hidden in the ocean, it will always be gold when recovered, and this fact explains the more romantic and adventurous searches after hidden submarine treasures lost in shipwrecks.

EARLY COLONIAL HOUSES.

Some Had Inner Stone Walls to Resist the Indian Raiders.

In America the early colonists had little use for the mason's art, except in the construction of the huge chimney stacks which in any dwelling of considerable size and any pretensions to comfort formed a very considerable part of the structure. The great kitchen fireplace and oven, with smaller hearths in from two to four rooms on each floor, required a very considerable part of the material and skilled labor bestowed upon a colonial homestead in the more northern colonies.

In some sections where the dangers of an attack by Indian raiders were imminent, the wooden walls of the lower story inclosed a stout wall of brick or a kind of rubble masonry. Some of these buildings are still standing and inhabited, although dating back at least so far as the lower stories are concerned over two centuries. A very few brick buildings have wholly or in part come down to us from the first years of colonization, and until within the last half century some that preserved the peculiar features of Elizabethan and Stuart types of dwelling and business structures. Much of the brick and about all the great flooring tiles and ornamental tiling were at first imported from Europe, but lime and brick of good quality were soon produced in almost every community.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Health and an Umbrella. A man's health is something like an umbrella. When once lost it is hard to get back, but when worn a little it may be recovered.
