ROOM PLAN OF APARTMENTS.

Here is a proposition for a home which will be a profitable investment. If one desires three bedrooms on each floor the library can be used for the third bedroom. There is also ample space for three chambers in the third story for servants' quarters. There is a full basement throughout, divided up so that each apartment has one-half. There is a large laundry to be used jointly by the occupants. The finish throughout each apartment for the principal rooms is red oak or birch. Finish in bedrooms off bathroom is pine to enamel, with mahogany doors. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet 6 inches in the clear. Size of this building is 28 feet wide and 57 feet from front to rear. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $5,200. By special arrangement with the architect the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications for $30.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply Saxton's book of plans entitled "American Dwellings." It contains 254 new and up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Among the special features of this design is the living room across the entire front, with open fireplace. The stairway works out in splendid shape with built-in bookcases on the landing. At the opposite end at the side of fireplace is a French door, which leads to the sun room. This is planned to be serviceable the year around. In the summer the sash can be raised, these openings being screened, thus making an open screened porch. Size 23 by 28 feet over main part. Full basement. First story, nine feet; second story, eight feet in the clear. There is space in the attic to finish one or two rooms. Birch or red oak finish throughout first story, pine to paint in second story. Hardwood floors throughout. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,800.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply Saxton's book of plans entitled "American Dwellings." It contains 254 new and up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

Back to Quality

After all the one big point in an electric automobile is Quality. You can't dodge it, whether you are a user or maker. Fancy frills are nice of course, but not unless they are backed up with Quality. We have added some frills to the new models of this year—smart body designs, satisfying conveniences of several kinds, luxurious upholstery, trimmings, etc., but first we went the limit in improving our batteries, our tires and all other parts where Quality is imperative. That's why the thinking buyer buys a Woods. His mind goes straight back to Quality—and lands him in a "Woods!" The new models are beauties, come and see them.

Also, be sure to get one of the new catalogs.

BOSCOBEL is an attractive town in Western Wisconsin, 257 miles from Chicago.

A journey there requires changes of cars and inconvenient hours. Two thousand active, busy people live in Boscobel, whose business can be solicited without trouble or inconvenience over the Bell Long Distance lines via the Chicago Telephone Company.

The rate is $1.25 for three minutes, and the saving of time is two days. Call "Long Distance."

For the Children

A Little Mother of New York's East Side.

Young people who live in the country where flowers and trees and green grass are on every side have playgrounds that the finest city park cannot furnish. Parks in the big cities are comparatively few, and then they are kept more for their beauty than for the entertainment of children. "Keep Off the Grass" is a sign that warns one not to leave the path. Except for a few small playgrounds this rule is rigidly enforced. How different in the country, where fields and woods are free! The happy youngsters may wander as will without fear of reproof. The picture shows a little mother of the east side tending to her New York amusing her baby brother. How she would enjoy a frolic with him in the green meadows instead of being confined to a busy city street!

Fate of the Monkey.

There are, with monkeys as with men, sad possibilities in life. While some live out all their days in peace and pleasure others are early brought face to face with a very hard fate.

The merry, playful little rascal may be taken by a trader, torn away from his comrades and carried overseas, to become the slave of a traveling organ grinder and to shiver in the strange cold streets of our crowded cities.

Or, again, as he is swinging himself on a slender bough he may become suddenly conscious of a pair of fierce eyes watching him, the eyes of an immense catlike creature, which has a superb buff coat, covered all over with black spots, and paws so strong that a single blow from one of them must be death to poor Jacko.

The leopard preys upon monkeys and is quite able to climb trees in pursuit of them. Even if he could get out of the way the hunted animal is usually too frightened to do so. With a kind of fearful fascination he sits watching the approach of the leopard until, with a spring and a cry, the tragedy is ended.

But that is not always his fate, and, after all, perhaps the monkey, who finds a quick death in his native land, is less to be pitied than the shivering little exile in a red jacket which we sometimes meet about our streets.—C. J. Blake.
