TRYING to do business without advertising is like winking in the dark. The merchant may know what he is doing but nobody else does.

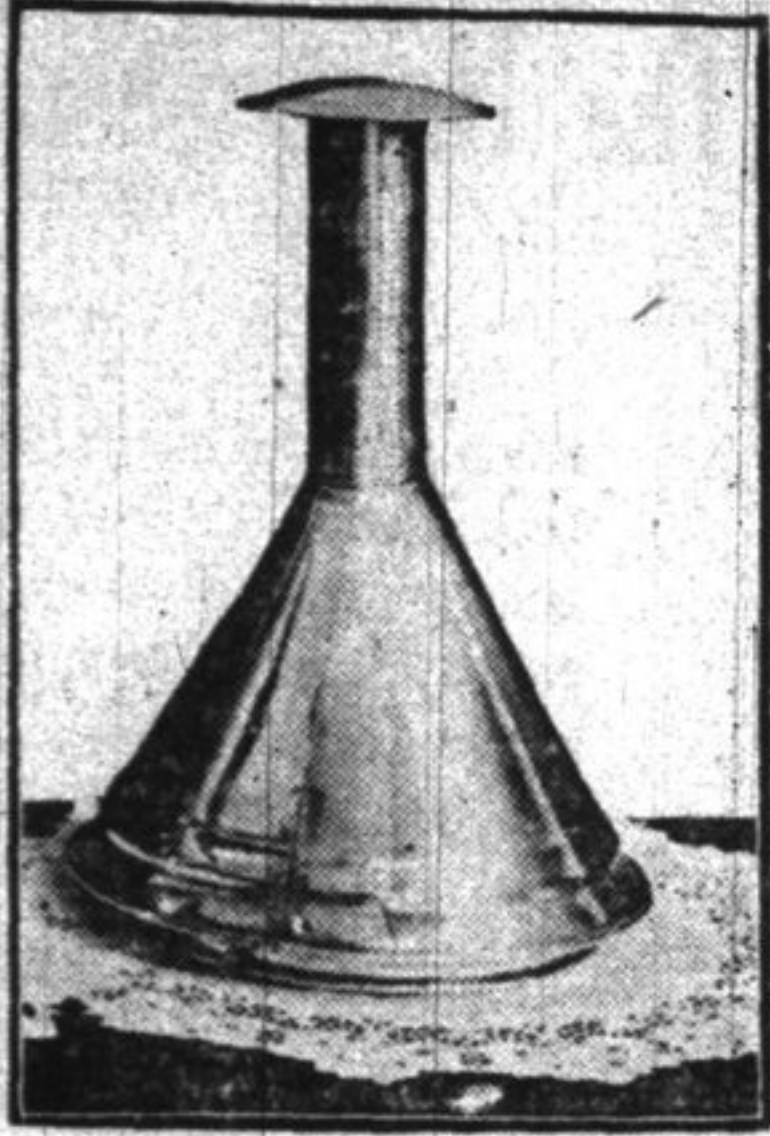

Fire Insurance like charity, begins at home. Putting hot furnace ashes into open barrels or cans is unsafe, and uncleanly. Witt's Corrugated Can is fire-proof, has close-fitting lid. Made of steel, galvanized. The only safe can for furnace ashes.

The Vacuum Washer Aid to Housewives.

NEW VACUUM WASHER.

No more rubbing of soiled clothes on a washboard now that the housewife has this new vacuum washer, which, placed in the boiler of steaming clothes, keeps the garments whisking around in the hot suds until they are almost entirely clean.

Out of the boiler the clothes are required only to be rinsed once or twice and hung out to dry.

The Camera Pose.

It seems a rather blunt thing to say that no woman without a little affectation takes a good photograph—unless, of course, she is a beauty; but the statement is true, none the less. The perfectly natural downright woman rarely photographs well. Unable to assume an expression she does not actually feel, she takes a position as stiff and uncomfortable as she really is before the fearsome eye of the camera, and her photograph lacks the charm and the grace of her own really charming and graceful personality, always evident when she is at her ease and not self-conscious.

The natural born coquette, on the other hand, is practiced in expressing things she does not feel by tricks of gesture, by head movement, by a sweep of the lashes, a raising of the eyes, and so on. "Look pleased," adjures the photographer, and she can do it in a minute—just as she can look demure, or coy, or soulful, or anything else as expediency requires. Naturally, she takes a charming photograph, often without possessing half the beauty of the woman who does not know how to pose before the camera.

The Season's Latest Style Note.

Fashion has decreed this season that for dressy suits the coat and skirt shall be of a contrasting color and material. In the cut is shown a charming example of this cut. The skirt is of silk serge in a delightful shade of pale biscuit color, and the coat, a jaunty affair, is of tobacco brown velvet. The silk sash fringed with dull

The Robespierre collar is of the velvet incrustated with dull gold passementerie. Altogether this is a mighty chic little calling costume, and every woman must have one of these sartorial luxuries in her wardrobe.

Fashion Proverbs.

A rolling fashion gathers no ward robe. When fashion enters the door bills fly in at the window. A woman is known by the length of time she keeps a fashion. Styles and sales wait for no woman.

SMART EFFECTS FOR WEDDINGS

How to Make a Success of the Reception and Other Social Events That Precede and Follow the Ceremony.

EVERY girl wants her wedding to be a pretty and successful one, but much thought and a good deal of personal effort must go into the preparation where menus are somewhat narrow.

The old fashioned "breakfast" offered much more formidable difficulties than the modern reception. Light refreshments may be delicious as well as inexpensive if made at home, to say nothing of the fact that three times the number can be entertained in a small house that would be possible to a "sit down" meal.

Often rooms communicate by folding doors, and so one large reception room can be obtained, or by taking in a balcony or porch sufficient room to entertain the prospective guests may be made.

The brilliant tints of autumn foliage are peculiarly charming for wedding decorations. A beautiful decorative scheme was the result of a combination of gold and scarlet autumn leaves with white lilies. Trails of gorgeous Virginia creeper wreathed balustrades, drooped from mantelpiece and trailed over the buffet, and here and there (in silver bases on the table) were placed stately white lilies.

Some form of liquid refreshment must be provided for every guest, together with sandwiches, patties, small cakes, creams, jellies and salad.

A satisfactory and inexpensive menu for an early autumn wedding would be: Egg and Cress and Ham and Tongue Sandwiches.

Lobster Salad in Finger Rolls. Fruit Salad. Lemon Cream. Trifle. Small Cakes, Claret Cup. Lemonade. Coffee.

The day preceding the wedding the bride and bridegroom bid formal farewell to their unmarried friends—the bridegroom by a dinner for the best man and ushers and the bride by a luncheon or tea for her maid or matron of honor and for the bridesmaids. Then the wedding souvenirs are bestowed upon the attendants, a simple and acceptable gift for each being a little gold pin.

If the bride gives a tea for the bridesmaids she may write a note to the bridegroom and his best man and the ushers to join the little party and have a cup of tea about 5 o'clock.

The bride's trousseau is not the elaborate thing that it was some years ago. Even wealthy brides are not provided with so many changes of raiment as in the past. The reason is that the variations in fashion are so marked from season to season that she would not have an opportunity to get a reasonable amount of wear out of the gowns before they should be out of fashion.

The bridal gown should be white, if possible. Fashion this season favors gowns of net trimmed with lace and made over a satin foundation. One such is illustrated here. It has a ruffled waist, over which the net is draped and bordered with bands of venise lace and knotted with orange blossoms. The sleeves are elbow length and of net and lace. The veil is draped closely to the head in an effect that suggests Marie Stuart and is knotted with sprays of orange blossoms and falls over the court train of the gown. A satin covered prayer book, from which depends a floral marker, was carried by the bride in this case instead of a bouquet.

The going away gown should be a simple tailored affair, accompanied by a handsome hat to match it. Brown or blue is the favorite color for fall.

PATERNALISM AND SOCIALISM.

It is idle for a thoughtful man in America, whether millionaire or pauper, to longer play the ostrich. Safety does not consist in hiding one's head in the sands of either sentiment or hope. It is foolish for the vastly rich to keep on insisting that more and more shall be added to their riches through a specious system of special legislation, ostensibly enacted to run the government, in reality enacted to loot the people. It is worse than ignorance for them to smile at the large body of intelligent Americans who regard themselves fortunate if the debit and credit accounts of life balance at the end of each year and to assume that the mighty many, who are becoming convinced that that social system which we call democracy is but a glittering generalities, will long endure the industrial slavery being produced. The hour has come when patriotism must consist in something more than eulogies upon the flag. Whether voting the ticket or not, men everywhere looking upon the awful injustice of this economic system are becoming socialistic in theory if not in conduct. And shall any fair minded man say that, if it redounds to the interest of the people of this country that a hundred men should control its business to the good of every one, there is anything fallacious in the theory that government instead of transferring business to a favored few for the benefit of all should itself discharge that business for the benefit of all? I have never been able to convince myself that either system would not cast a pall over human action and dull the motives which have heretofore moved mankind to the very loftiest endeavor. And yet I do not hesitate to say that if it be impossible to restore this republic to its ancient ideals, which I do not believe, and I must make the ultimate choice between the paternalism of the few and the socialism of the many, count me and my house with the throbbing heart of humanity.—Thomas R. Marshall.

Too Much Seasoning. "What is this thing?" asked the man at the lunch counter. "A sandwich, of course. What did you think it was?" said the girl behind the counter. "I thought it was a mustard plaster."—New York Mail.

Arresting Time. "Even a policeman can't arrest the sight of time," said the funny man. "Oh, I don't know," rejoined the matter of fact person. "Only this morning I saw a policeman enter a side door and stop a few minutes." Her Luck. "Too bad Mrs. Smartiegh always has such abundant weather for her afternoon teas." "Yes, she never pours but it rains."—Judge. Lucky. Missus—I see you broke my china plate in two. The Cook—This is my lucky day. I generally have to gather the pieces in a dustpan.—Chicago News. Willing to Demonstrate. "Tommy," said his distressed mother, "I don't see how you can get so dirty." "Come on out and I'll show you," was the prompt reply.—Chicago Post.
