Woman's World

Miss Helen Gould
and Her Romance.

MISS HELEN GOULD.
The engagement of Miss Helen Gould, known as one of the foremost of women philanthropists, to Philip J. Shepard, a railroad man, of St. Louis, was recently announced by her brother, George J. Gould, at his home in Lakewood, N. J.

The news of her engagement was a surprise to many of her closest friends. Miss Gould is now forty-four years old. Since the death of her father, Jay Gould, on Dec. 12, 1892, which left her one of the richest women in America, rumors of her intended marriage have been so often started and denied that it had come to be believed that Miss Gould would never marry.

Mr. Shepard, Miss Gould's fiance, is just one year her senior and is assistant to the president of the Missouri Pacific, Iron Mountain and Denver and Rio Grande railroads. Besides being a railroad man of the highest reputation, Mr. Shepard has many other claims to distinction. He is an all round athlete, being particularly fond of golf, tennis and rowing, is a baseball pitcher and a football player. He is known to his friends as a lover of literature and as a musician and possesses an unusually good baritone voice.

Mr. Shepard is very popular with the rank and file of the railroad men and since his connection with the Gould lines has been an ardent supporter of the philanthropic enterprises undertaken by Miss Gould.

Although Miss Gould and Mr. Shepard have been acquainted for many years, it was not until last March that they became deeply interested in each other. At that time Miss Gould made a trip over the Gould railroads to inspect the Young Men's Christian Association buildings which have been established chiefly through her influence. Mr. Shepard in his official capacity accompanied Miss Gould and her party on the trip over the Denver and Rio Grande.

Miss Gould's charities are probably on a larger scale than those of any other American woman. Her greatest popularity was reached during the days of the Spanish-American war when her efforts in behalf of American soldiers and sailors caused her to be ranked with Florence Nightingale.

Miss Gould is rather shy and retiring in her manner and not at all fond of society. The wedding will probably take place some time in January.

Points to Remember.

Never keep needles in a needlebook with the "leaves" made of flannel. The dressing in the woolen cloth is very apt to rust them. Make the "leaves" of your needlebooks of small pieces of chamois skin or bits of kid cut from your cast off gloves. It is best to have a small emery bag attached to the book or case in which your needles are kept. In case one of them becomes rusted it can be cleaned by passing it through the emery several times.

Before sewing belting on a wash skirt shrink the belting by pouring boiling water over it and letting it soak therein for five or ten minutes. Dry and iron. If this precaution is not taken, the first time the skirt is washed the belt will shrink and in all probability will have to be taken off the skirt and made larger before the skirt can be worn again. Save yourself trouble and work by shrinking the belt first.

Instead of putting machine stitched plats or tufts in lace blouse or one of very fine material catch the tufts down with French knots. These can be worked in any shade you desire or can be white or the color that matches the blouse. Net and lace are sure to shrink when washed, causing the machine stitching to pucker or break when the garment is ironed or pulled into shape. In any case the French knots make a very attractive trimming.

Going by Opposites.

"What is your name?"
"Minnie, minn."
"All right, but we expect a maximum amount of work out of you!"—
"I know."

FOR SLIM FIGURES.

The Cutaway Style is Especially Designed.

THE "DICKY BIRD" COAT.

There is something undeniably elegant and chic about the cutaway—or "dicky bird" coat, as it is familiarly called. This sort of wine colored Bengaline is trimmed with matching velvet, and dull gold boots with buttoned wine colored cloth tops accompany the costume.

Folding Desks For Small Rooms.

Dainty little desk tables of white enameled wood fold up like camp stools and can be tucked away behind a screen or in a closet. When opened the white table has a square top to which are attached blotter, cabinet for paper and envelopes and various desk implements, all fastened down under straps.

The most highly prized turquoise are of a deep azure color, and they most have a certain property called the "sat," which may be likened to the so called "water" of the diamond, or the "instar" of the pearl. The deep azure color of a turquoise may fade soon after being exposed to light and air. Consequently tourists buying the stones in Persia have to guard against turquoise that have been kept in damp earthenware pots.

Weavers Farmers to Meet.

The third international congress of the Women Farmers' association will be held at Ghent, Belgium, on June 13, 14 and 15 of this year, while the tenth international congress of agriculture is in session at the Universal exposition. The president of the organizing committee is the Baroness Rots de Herting, and Miss Constance Pim of Plunkett House, Dublin, is the secretary for Great Britain.

The first associations of women agriculturists were instituted in Canada and the United States fifteen years ago, while it is scarcely six years since associations of a similar kind were formed in Europe. In 1911, following the lead of Belgium and at the inspiration of its leaders in this movement, Austria-Hungary and France formed numerous associations.

FOOLED THE OFFICIAL.

Clever Trick a Daring Deceit Played Upon an Englishman.

It was years ago in Burma. The English government was having trouble with a certain princey recalcitrant named Bob Toh, "the most daring and enterprising of the rebels." A heavy price had been set upon the rebel's head, but still Bob Toh was cunningly elusive.

At last, hard pressed, Bob Toh tried a ploy trick. He walked straight into the office of the commissioner.

"I am Bob Toh," he said simply. "I have come to surrender."

Exactly what he had counted on now happened. Fourteen years' experience with eastern subtlety and intrigue had taught the commissioner to be wary.

"Thank you," he said. "We will now proceed to discover who you really are and what you really want. Tell me, what do you expect to get out of this?"

"Ten thousand rupees," said the Bob Toh quietly.

The commissioner, although a cool man, was a little staggered. "I don't quite follow," he murmured.

"Yet it's quite simple," whispered the Bob. "The government promises 10,000 rupees to the man who brings you the head of Bob Toh. I give it to you."

"Capital," was the wary answer. "But as you lose your head what good does the money do you?"

"My wife and children get the money."

"Pretty good, my man, but not quite good enough. Ten thousand rupees will be nothing to Bob Toh."

"If it were not I should not be here. I have been deserted and robbed. I am sure to be captured. My family might as well have the money while I can still command it."

"But why shouldn't I keep the money? I hand your head over, you know."

"Because you are an English gentleman. I chose my man, you see."

The commissioner mused awhile. Then he broke silence. "Look here, I know you are not the Bob. That is quite clear. I don't care who you are. But tell me frankly what you want."

The Burmese hesitated awhile. Then he said: "You're right. But my life is worth as little as the Bob's. I have betrayed him and robbed him. He has sworn revenge. Give me an escort as far as Mandalay. Here, take these notes for 10,000 rupees"—he had laid them on the table—"and keep them for twelve days' time. Do not tell you how and when you can capture the Bob. Keep them till the Bob is caught if you prefer."

The commissioner thought hard and in silence for quite two minutes.

"I agree," he said at length.

So the Bob was safely escorted to Mandalay. Later the commissioner received a letter from him.

"You may keep those rupees," it ran.

"which I, Bob Toh, left with you twelve days ago. I bid you the truth. You would not believe me. The English government likes truth, and it likes money... but they never want both, I think, at the same time."

A FAVORITE GEM.

The Best Turquoises Women Wear Come From Omar's Land.

By far the largest part of the world's turquoise comes from the mines near the Persian city of Nishapur, where Omar Khayyam was born and lies buried. The mines are situated in a range of mountains rising to a height of 6,000 feet. The highest point at which turquoise have been found is 5,800 feet above sea level, and the lowest point 4,800 feet. The geologic formation of the Nishapur mountains is porphyries, greenstone, limestone and sandstone, the turquoise being found in veins in the rock. The methods of the Persians who operate the mines is quite antiquated, for only ladders and pulleys are used in the rough shafts.

The most highly prized turquoise are of a deep azure color, and they most have a certain property called the "sat," which may be likened to the so called "water" of the diamond, or the "instar" of the pearl. The deep azure color of a turquoise may fade soon after being exposed to light and air.
