

Things You Seldom See

A wink from the eye of a needle,
A nail from the finger of fate,
A plume from the wing of an army,
And a drink from a bar of a gate

A hair from the head of a hammer,
A bite from the teeth of a saw,
A race on a course of study
And a joint from a limb of the law

A check that is drawn on a sand bank,
Some fruit from the jamb of a door,
And people who get better bargains

Artificial Light

The ape—like contemporaries of the Pleistocene man, whose skull was dug up in England last summer, had somehow learned to make fire and understood that its light made an island in the darkness. That was anywhere up to the millions of years ago.

Remarkable, isn't that the art of artificial lighting progressed so slowly? The polished Romans of the Augustan age went to bed shortly after the roosters because really they knew no good way to light their houses.

The Country Town Nowadays

It's a thousand times better lighted than the proudest city of antiquity. And the houses in it—the kings' palaces of old were not in their class in the matter of lighting, even the little ones. Because with a few exceptions they use Electric Light.

It's at those exceptions this advertisement is aimed. We want them as customers.

Our proposition is attractive. We will wire old houses and spread the payment over two years, a little each month. Let us tell you about it.
