CAREFUL OF THEIR COWS.

Isle of Jersey Sees to It That the Breed is Kept Absolutely Pure.

Undoubtedly the little island of Jersey has been enriched by the profit of its cows. In modern days potato raising and fruit culture have helped, but it is the solid, continual profit of the cattle that has made the island rich.

So carefully do they tend them there and so frugal are they of waste in trodden pastures, says Our Dumb Animals, that they actually tether their animals, and the children or indoor servants shift them at morn, noon and night.

Gentleness is their cue in handling the calf, which, after a dose of mother's milk, has to be content with skim-milk or skillegalee. She is haltered and fed by hand and becomes docile and gentle and when two years old yields millocks or out her bountiful bucketful of frothy, rich milk to the quiet women folk who milk her.

The Jersey breed is kept pure by stringent laws against the importation of foreign stock. The summer pasturage is very rich, and cattle remain out from May till October, but during the winter they are always comfortably housed.

The milk is used almost exclusively in making butter. A good Jersey will make an average of a pound of butter every day in the year. The Jersey is beautiful in form, and her abounding dairy products make her a favorite with the household, an ornament to any farm or estate and a source of great profit to her owner.

Origin of St. James' Palace.

Henry VIII, when he built St. James' palace designed it for a country residence to take the place of the manor of Lenington, where he had been in the habit of going for a change of air. He pulled down the hospital dedicated to St. James the Less and on its site, as Holmsted tells us, "built a goodly manor and made a faire park for his greater comolittle and pleasure." The palace stood in the midst of fields well stocked with game, and these were inclosed by its private demesne. Even while residing here Henry held his court first at Westminster and then at Whitehall after he had taken the latter palace from Wolsey. It was not until 1607, when Whitehall was destroyed by fire, that St. James' palace became the London residence of monarchs.—London Standard.

Writing to Help.

Just told to father-in-law—Ahem! You remember, sir, you said that after we were married you'd assist me in furnishing a horse. Father-in-Law—And so I will, my boy. Come down to the corrier and I'll introduce you to a friend of mine who is in the installment business.—Boston Transcript.

Too Willing.

Old Lady (in tears, to chemist)—Will you poison my dear lit-tle Fido? He's in such—such agony. Chemist (politely)—With pleasure, madam. Old Lady (indignantly)—With pleasure, you nasty, unfeeling man! Then you shan't do it!—London Answers.

Two Ways.

A woman always compliments another woman's gown. A man glances casually at a new suit of clothes and says, "Where was the fire?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

To Know Later On.

"Can you manage a typewriter?" "Ask me in about a year. We've only been married a month."—

Housework Superstitions.

You should always mark a cross on the top of a cake or a pan of bread before you set it to rise. This will prevent the devil from jumping on it and crushing it down flat.

Never turn a bed on Friday or the person who sleeps in it will have bad nights for a week.

Breakages always go in threes. So, if you have broken one thing, you should immediately smash two more worthless ones—empty bottles or something of that kind—so that the breaking may be over and done with.

Never put a pair of shoes on a table for this leads to a quarrel.

If two people wash their hands in the same water they should spit in it and cross it; otherwise they will quarrel very shortly.

A black cat that comes into the house of its own free will brings good luck.

If you spill salt you should cross it and throw some of it over your left shoulder.

All Stars.

Wiseguy—I want a dramatic sketch with forty heroines in it. Sketch Writer—Forty heroines? Wiseguy—Yes, sir. We have forty young ladies in our dramatic club, and they all want to play the lead.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Fancy requires much, necessity but little.—German Proverb

Public Carressing.

The same quietness of demeanor which marks well bred people in public conveyances or meeting places should be practiced on the street. Carresses in public or calling to acquaintances the width of the street away is distinctly in bad form, and a lack of consideration for others is shown in the carelessness which does not keep to the right side of the sidewalk in promenading, which rushes through swinging doors without a backward glance to see whom the door may catch in the rebound, which presses in ahead at box office and ticket office with no respect for the rights of those earlier on the ground. Another violation of courtesy is to be laid to the charge of the man who smokes on the street when with a woman.

Etiquette For the Debutants.

Etiquette forbids a debutante to issue invitations to men. A written note signed by her and expressing the wish of her mother that she write is permissible, but engraved invitations must not be sent by unmarried women to their men friends.

Good Excuse.

"Why do you keep me waiting on this corner two hours?" demanded the irate husband. "You said you were merely going to step in to see how Mrs. Gabbie was."

"Well, she insisted on telling me."

Ginger Snaps.

Ginger snaps demand a prominent place upon any cooky roster, and their claims are not to be denied. A "tried and true" recipe bids one put into a mixing bowl a cupful of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of glucose, a generous pinch of salt, one tablespoonful vinegar and a scant cupful of drippings (if you have no beef drippings try lard.) Mix these ingredients well together and add a cupful of molasses. New Orleans preferred, which is boiling and into which has been stirred two rounding tablespoonfuls of soda. Mix with enough flour to make a stiff dough. Roll as thin as possible and bake in a moderate oven.

Lamb Kidneys a la Terrapin.

Cut six lamb kidneys in half, throw into cold water and let boil about fifteen minutes. Make a white sauce of two level tablespoonfuls of flour and the same of butter and half a pint of milk. Stir the butter over the fire to melt, add flour and stir until smooth, and then add the milk and stir and cook until smooth and creamy. Cut the kidneys into smaller pieces and add to the hot sauce with a hard-boiled egg chopped fine, salt and pepper to taste and a teaspoonful of minced parsley. Cook a few minutes and serve. A little sherry wine may be added if desired just before sending to the table.

O. V. B. Chopper cuts cleaner and does not mash or squeeze. Four (4) Knives with each chopper for cutting in uniform pieces all sorts of vegetables, meats, fruits, bread, nuts, suet, etc. fine or coarse as wanted. It is easy to operate—easy to clean—nothing to get out of order. A daily labor saver and necessary tool in any kitchen.
