When the Silver Stars went to bat in the seventh inning, the home team had which, at that stage of the game, seemed more than sufficient to insure a Highland Park victory. In this inning, however, the visitors redoubled their efforts to tie the count; they fell upon Glader's offerings unted before the side was finally retired. And in the ninth inning, with the Crescents still one run to the good, the Stars made another desperate attempt to save the game. They succeeded in tying the score, and had it not been for a bit of fast fielding on the part of Shields, Richuds and Flinn, which resulted in a double by that put a sudden and unexpected check on the rally, they would have done
