PRE-OLYMPIC ATHLETIC CARNIVAL

Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6

From June 28 to July 6, Grant Park, Chicago, will be the scene of the greatest athletic carnival ever held in America. Under the auspices of the International Athletic Championships Association a Pre-Olympic carnival rivaling any perhaps excelling the Stockholm event will be conducted for the especial purpose of ultimately benefiting the children of Chicago and the country at large.

Athletes from all over this country and from many of the great nations of Europe will meet in contests of strength, speed, agility and endurance.

Men whose names spell champion in various events have already sent in their entries and from as far as Stockholm have come cablegrams assuring the Chicago men of their active co-operation.

Every civic body in Chicago is backing the meet. These include the city council, the Board of Education, the Association of Commerce, the League of Cook County clubs, and the united German Turner and Singing societies.

The proceeds of the meet will be devoted to a fund for the erection of a permanent stadium on the lake front for the especial benefit of the school children of Chicago.

LEGENDS OF THE SWORD.

Curious Beliefs That Hovered Round the Ancient Weapon.

Countless legends and superstitions have attached to the sword since the days when fighting was the principal occupation of life. So highly was the sword esteemed that Mohammed to the Koran declared it to be "the key to heaven and hell."

The warrior or knight gave a name to his sword. He vowed at the altar never to draw it in a false cause. It was his companion and friend and descended from father to son for many generations. One sword named "Brother of the Lightning" had a golden hilt inscribed with magic words. In times of peace these were said to be illegible, but before a battle "they glowed red as blood."

It was believed, moreover, that a sword after long use acquired a life of its own. Many famous swords were said to utter cries before battle, and after a weapon had killed five score men it became blood hungry and leaped from its scabbard at the approach of a foe. Certain swords were said to refuse to give a wound in a bad cause. Among these was the broad Excalibur, which was given to King Arthur by a fairy and which Richard Coeur de Lion professed to own.

In the east superstitions reverence is still paid to the sword. The Deities of Japan, when they voluntarily surrendered their rank, kept as a relic the wonderful blades which had been handed down from generation to generation. In some cases for more than a thousand years, and which had absorbed, as they believed, some of the character and life of the men that had owned them.—Harper's Weekly.

SARDINIAN BAGPIPES.

So Exhausting That Nearly All Who Played Them Died Young.

Bagpipes are the Bulgarian national instrument. Until lately the servants who waited on the Turkish grand vizier in Constantinople were mutes, though not, as in former times, persons specially mutilated, but children born deaf and dumb. They used a language of signs, with a special gesture to describe the representative of each nation. To indicate the Bulgarian agent they imitated a man playing on the bagpipes. It was not the Bulgarians who invented the pipes, however. They are among the oldest of musical instruments. An ancient gem shows Apollo with them, and two instruments in the book of Daniel are believed to have been bagpipes.

The bagpipes range not only in time from Apollo and the Bible to the present day, but geographically from China to Spain and Great Britain. England is said to have given them to Scotland. One country, however, finally lost a peculiarly severe form of the instrument. This was the Sardinian "lunedda," which had three pipes, all placed in the piper's mouth, and was played by rubbing strips of wax up and down over the holes.

The work was so exhausting that nearly all the pipers died young. In 1845 George Burdett came across one who had survived to the age of eighty. But he was the last of the lunedda players, and when he died the instrument was played no more.—Chicago News.

A Country Place.

"Now this country place is improved with asphalt streets, electric lights and brick walks."

"You don't understand. I'm looking for a country place that is improved with some turf, a lake, perhaps, and a few trees."—Kansas City Journal.
