FATHER OF PHRENOLOGY.

Dr. Gall at One Time Had the Whole of Europe In a Furore. The first public notice of the "Father of Phrenology" appeared in Weiland's "Dutch Mercury" on Aug. 14, 1798. Gall was a practicing physician the talents and disposition of men are dependent upon the functions of the at Owosso, 'Mich., and the contract one and a quarter inches wide and a brain and, furthermore, that they may agent with the No. 1 advertising car | thousandth part of an inch in thickbe inferred with perfect exactitude had failed to come to terms with the ness. Gall was an able man. He set forth his theory in a graphic, unctuous manner, and in a very brief period he had all Europe at the top notch of excitement. The idea spread like wildfire. and in all grades of society people were discussing "the greatest of all discoveries." The new theory had to meet the customary opposition from the custodians of truth and the preservers of morality, but the opposition only increased the popularity of the theory, and Gall's celebrity increased by leaps and bounds. His lectures were interdicted, and he was threatened with the direst pennities unless be ceased his "immoral and atheistical" teachings, but he kept on with his propaganda, visiting all the large towns of Germany and the continent, and by 1805 all of Europe was interested in

Missed the Bird and Lost, The Glasgow News records a singu far incident during a lawn tennis tie. The two players, who may be term ed A and B, were very evenly match ed. The game was long, and sometimes one and sometimes the other parrowly led At length when A was within a stroke of defeat he returned a half softly, and it looked as if his fate was senied. So it would have been, but just at that moment a bird flew across the court in a line parallel with the ball.

"As all good tennis players can well understand, B mistook the bird for the ball and "smashed" at it vigorous It swiftly rose and he missed it by a feather's breadth, and ere be could recover his balance the ball had dropped on his court.

This stroke proved the turning point in the tie, as A thereafter played up strongly and ran out winner.

The Sheep in the Grass.

Lord Palmerston once inspected "Summer in the Lowlands," a picture by Sir John Watson Gordon, "Look here," said Lord Palmerston to the artist, "why should the grass in that field be so long when there are so many sheep in the field?"

"My lord," replied the artist, "those sheep were only turned into the field last night!"

Prehistoric Man In Belgium.

Prelietoric man has been traced in several periods in Belgium, and M Putot, a Belgian geogogist, has mide a novel attempt to estimate the popul lation at different stages. In the lower Anrignacian period five of Bergium's numerous caves seem to have been in habited, their capacity being fifty to sixty persons in the Magdalenean period the population was probably sixty. Refrent of the ice permitted leaving the shelters at the close of this period, and the settlers on the banks of the lakes may soon have numbered 100 or 150. Stormy Cape Horn.

The waters of Cape Horn have never been unvisited by storms for more than a week or two at a stretch within the memory of man. Standing on the outposts of the world, Cape Horn is the meeting place of ocean currents of very different temperature, from the icy cold waters of the Antarctic drift to the warmth of the Brazilian and Peruvian return currents. The prevailing winds are from the northwest and west, and these, coming from the warm regions of the Pacific, condense into fogs, which the sailors call "Cape Horn blankets" and which are the low level to which the glaciers of Tierra del Fuego descend, the perpetual congelation of the subsoil, the meeting of conflicting winds at very different temperatures, are all direct or indirect causes combining to make this the most constantly stormy region of the world
