Ossoli Club

Italy was the subject of the day at the Ossoli meeting last Thursday afternoon. Interesting papers were read by Miss Adele Everett and Miss Marion Mason. "The Hill Towns" by the former and "Four Great Families" by the latter. Mrs. Ross J. Beatty in Italian costume played the harp while Mrs. Carleton Vail, also dressed in Italian costume, sang most charmingly several selections. The guest of honor, Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs spoke to the ladies on "What the Club Women of today could do in their Larger Opportunities." Petitions were signed by those present in regard to the hauling away of sand from the lake shore and a new drainage system in our city. The hostesses of the afternoon were Mesdames George Merritt, E. B. Metzler, H. D. Faxon, Charles E. Follansbee, Charles Harbaugh, Wm. R. Ruffner, Forest E. Marsh, Robert F. Hussey, C. E. Schaffner, and Sidney J. Holland.

The Mullahs of India.

A mullah, or, as it is more properly written, mollah, is a title given in India and throughout the east generally to a religious leader of any description. Thus the sultan of Turkey is a mollah, because he is the supreme head of the Moslem world. And there are hundreds of others. To most of the more conspicuous among them is prefixed the adjective "mad." This, however, must not be taken to mean that they are insane, the word being used rather in its oriental significance of "inspired." The person of the mollah is sacred. Not even the mighty Habibullah himself would care to lay a sacrilegious finger on one of these saintly personages. If he were to venture such an unheard of thing vengeance would surely overtake him. For it is the cardinal principle of the Ulama—as the mollahs are collectively termed—that an injury purposely caused to one of their number can only be atoned for by the death of the individual inflicting it.

Trap of the Fourmillion.

"In the Sahara," said an explorer, "there is a little insect that throws sand and its volleys slay." They call it the fourmillion. The fourmillion dig itself a funnel shaped hole of the circumference of a silver dollar. It lies hidden and watchful in the bottom of this hole, and when a spider or ant or beetle comes cautiously prospecting down the steep and slippery sides the inhospitable fourmillion launches upon its guest volley after volley of sand—hall of stinging sand so abundant, so suffocating, so blinding that the visitor loses its head. He rolls unconscious for the nonce to the bottom of the hole, and the fourmillion calmly dismembers him before he has time to come to himself again and puts him in thearder for the next meal.

Repaid.

An Irishman knocked at a door one day and asked the lady of the house, who was very ugly, if she could help him, as he was hard up and on the road. "Indeed I'll not," she replied. "And if you don't clear off out of this I'll call my husband, who is a policeman, and he'll come and take you." "I quite believe ye, missis," retorted Pat. "He'd take anything when he took you."—Argonaut.

ORIGIN OF THE TELEPHONE.

It Sprung From Bell's Efforts to Teach the Deaf to Speak.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell is reported to have explained in a lecture how he came to invent the telephone as follows:

"My father invented a symbol by which deaf mutes could converse, and finally I invented an apparatus by which the vibrations of speech could be seen, and it turned out to be a telephone. It occurred to me to make a machine that would enable one to hear vibrations. I went to an aurist, and he advised me to take the human ear as my model. He supplied me with a dead man's ear, and with this ear I experimented, and upon applying the apparatus I found that the dead man's ear wrote down the vibrations.

"I arrived at the conclusion that if I could make iron vibrate on a dead man's ear I could make an instrument more delicate which would cause those vibrations to be heard and understood. I thought if I placed a delicate piece of steel over an electric magnet I could get a vibration, and thus the telephone was completed.

"The telephone arose from my attempts to teach the deaf to speak. It arose from my knowledge not of electricity, but as a teacher of the deaf. Had I been an electrician I would not have attempted it."

"Belling the Cat."

"Who will bell the cat?" is a curious old proverb, famous in parables and in history. The nice, says the fable, held a consultation how to secure themselves from the cat, and they resolved to hang a bell about the cat's neck to give warning when she approached, but after they had resolved on doing it they were as far as ever, for who would do it?

Both parable and proverb have immortalized themselves in history. When the Scottish nobles met at Strling in a body they proposed to make Spence, the obnoxious favorite of James II., and hang him and so get rid of him.

"Ah," said Lord Grey, "that's very well said, but who'll bell the cat?" "That will I," said the black, and he undertook the task, and was called "Bell the Cat" until his dying day.—Glasgow Times.

His Foot in It.

"Well," said the hostess, bidding her guest good night, "you have a long drive home, but it's a lovely evening."

"Yes, isn't it a fine night?" answered the guest addressed.

"So you'll have a nice drive and won't wish you hadn't come to see me."

"On the contrary, I assure you, I always think that the drive home is the very best part of affairs like this."

Another one of the things that might have been put differently if one had had time to think it over.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Links" as Applied to Golf.
Speaking of games, how many know the origin of the word "links" as applied to the field on which golf is played? The dictionary says that "links" means stretch of sandy soil, interrupted by heather. But it comes from an old Saxon word "hlinc," which means a ledge, an embankment, a boundary. Matern link and the links of St. Andrews were there and somebody invented a game to go with them.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MURDER TRIALS.

Holland Has a System of Its Own For Dispensing Justice.

A learned and capable jurist has asserted that the French method of legal procedure, which, contrary to our own, presumes an indicted person guilty until he is proved innocent, comes nearer dispensing actual justice than our own system.

But in Holland the courts have, in some respects, a better system than that of the French. The accused in every case has the benefit of the doubt, and circumstantial evidence is the only foundation for a plea of conviction is in disfavor.

The Dutch do not have juries, and there is no battle of wits among counsel. All questions, whether by the prosecution or the attorney for the accused, are put to the witness through the judge after he has weighed the justice of the interrogation.

This feature of their system has some pronounced advantages over our own. It eliminates the practice of confusing the witness or the accused by misleading questions. It renders impossible the abominable practice in our courts known as the "browbeating" of witnesses, which unfortunately is permitted to an extent that causes the intelligent observer's blood to boil at times because of its unfairness and cruelty. It makes the solemn business of dispensing justice a common tradition instead of a heavenly vocation.—Stour City Tribune.

VENUS—HOT AND COLD.

One Half the Planet Burns, While the Other Half Always Freezes.

Venus, the "evening star" of the poets, the most brilliant object in our western sky, that planet which revolves around the sun in a path inside ours, must if inhabited have beings of a very different type from ourselves, for Venus has always had one hemisphere turned toward the sun and one turned away from it. Consequently it is always daytime and summer on one-half of Venus, always night and winter on the other half.

As Venus is more than 23,000,000 miles nearer the sun than we are, it must be twice as hot on her day side as it ever is at our equator. And on her night side, where a ray of sun light has never shone, it must be so cold that the air is liquefied, if not solidified. There must be a constant uprush of hot air from the scorched surface and a corresponding inrush of icy air from the frigid side. Along the boundary between the two hemispheres this must cause a violent and perhaps almost perpetual rainfall.

Seen through a small telescope or field glass Venus often appears like a crescent. Then are visible the projections that can be nothing but mountains of great height.—New York

Strong Points of Difference Between these two Typical Plants

One runs by steam—that is it uses a large portion of its developed energy to carry power into the shop. That's loss. In the other Electric Motor Drive delivers just the power required to each tool with no leaks on the route. That's profit.

Notice the other feature—Cleanliness

It's another of the numerous advantages of Electric Power
