HE WAS A MIGHTY KING.

If the Record on the Tomb of Sardanapalus Be True.
 An ancient legend tells us that Sardanapalus was the founder of Tarsus, while others ascribe that honor to Senacherib, king of Nineveh, of whom the Bible record speaks. An interesting part of this legend about Sardanapalus, the last of the Assyrian kings, tells us that he recorded on his tomb near Anchiale, a nearby city, in one day, a feat surely worthy of any king. But the kings of those days, it must be remembered, took as much license with the record on their tombs as any Munchausen who ever lived.
 We are also told that on this tomb was a statue of the king snapping his fingers, while this inscription was written beneath: "Sardanapalus, son of Anakydaraxes, built Anchiale and Tarsus in one day. Eat, drink and play, for everything else is not worth this" (in snap of your fingers).
 Whether this statue and its description are purely mythical or not, the tradition was probably current in Paul's time, as his own words indicate: "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." What greater contrast could there be than between the strenuous, manly, undaunted apostle and the voluptuous, base king who was said to have founded the city where, hundreds of years later, St. Paul was born?—Christian Herald.

BEST OF ALL JOURNALISTS.

St. Mark Has Been Called the Reporter Among the Apostles.
 The greatest journalist the world ever knew lived 1,500 years or more before the invention of type, according to Rev. Dr. Frank N. Palmer, who awarded the palm to St. Mark and wondered at the marvels that he might have accomplished if he had lived in the days of printing presses.
 St. Matthew put his chronicles in twenty-eight chapters; St. Luke used twenty-four to tell his story; St. John used twenty-one, but St. Mark covered all the details more vividly in sixteen, and, true to the spirit of action that animates his kind, put a miracle in every chapter.
 St. Mark, Dr. Palmer said, was the reporter among the apostles. His view point, his language and his marvelous ability to give action and climax, clash and color in a sentence should be a glowing example to the newspaper writers of this day.
 Each of the other apostles speaks of skies that opened, Mark says they were rent asunder. He is the only one among his brethren who stopped duly fully to describe the color of a given scene. In the writings of his fellows it is told that the people went to the Sermon on the Mount. Mark writes vividly that the people ran.
 In writing for the Romans he used colorful allusions and the references to wild beasts to touch their intelligence in sympathetic fashion at every stroke.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Stellar Elements.

The spectroscopic shows the lines as far in stellar research of forty-five elements well known here in the earth. Hydrogen exists in all stars in enormous quantities. Iron and a number of other metals likewise are incandescent in the sun, and in all other stars bright enough to send rays into the grating for analysis.
 An element named coronium is now seen glowing in the envelopes of the sun, but it has not been discovered here on earth yet. Helium was seen in the sun for a number of years before it was finally discovered in the earth. Stars vary in the character of the rays emitted; therefore all stars are not alike. And the differences indicate differences in their ages.—New World.

WHALES IN THE HUDSON.

They Gave the Dutch Colonists a Scare in the Winter of 1646.
 In 1646 the colony of Rensselaerswijck had a very hard winter of it indeed. On the 25th of November the North river was closed and remained frozen for four months. A very high freshet followed, which destroyed a number of houses in the vicinity, nearly carried away the fort and inflicted considerable damage in the colony.
 This, however, was not an unusual thing to the colonists, who in Holland had been accustomed to equally hard winters. Much worse was the appearance of a sea monster that they had never seen in their native country.
 "At the same time as the freshet," says Antoine de Hooges, secretary of Rensselaerswijck, "there appeared before us a certain fish of considerable size, snow white in color, round in the body and blowing water out of his head. What it portended God the Lord only knew. At the same instant this fish appeared we had the first thunder and lightning this year." The public astonishment had scarcely subsided when another monster was seen, estimated at forty feet in length, of a brown color, having fins in his back and ejecting water in like manner high in the air.
 This fish "which had first ascended the river (the North river) stranded on his return to sea on an island some forty miles from the mouth of the river, near which place four others grounded this year."
 This island goes since by the name of Walvisch or Whale Island.—Gazette de Hollande.

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Those Who Are and Are Not Eligible to the House of Commons.
 The British parliament consists of the king (or queen regnant), the lords spiritual and temporal and the commons. The crown virtually appoints the lords spiritual, and the peerages of the lords temporal have been created by the crown, but the members of the house of commons are elected.
 Every male British subject of full age and sound mind is eligible unless he is a peer, a member of the clergy of the Roman Catholic church, the Church of England or the Church of Scotland, a judicial officer, a holder of an office under the crown which has been created since 1705 or a pensioner from the crown.
 A member of the house of commons holds office until the dissolution of parliament by proclamation under the great seal. The king summons parliament to meet and prescribes the time and place of its meeting, prorogues and dissolves it and commands the writ for the election of members to the house of commons. The present statute law exacts the meeting of parliament once in three years, but the annual voting of supplies has superseded obsolete statutes.
 In addition to the general elections held after the dissolution of a parliament, there are by-elections, occurring when a seat has become vacant by the death of a member, by his succession to the peerage or by his acceptance of office under the crown.—New York Times.

Mazzini Loved London's Fog.

What feature of London has the strongest appeal for the foreigner? Mazzini loved above all things else the London fog.
 "When you look up," he wrote, "the eye loses itself in a reddish, bell-shaped vault, which always gives me, I don't know why, an idea of the phosphorescent light of the inferno. The whole city seems under a kind of spell and reminds me of the witches' scene in 'Macbeth' or the Brocksberg or the Witch of Endor. The passersby look like ghosts. One feels almost a ghost oneself."
 And years after he had left London for Italy he writes to a friend, "I think very often under these radiant skies of the London fogs and always regretfully."
 —London Spectator.

Wanted Information.

At Bellevue hospital many of the orderlies are harmless and willing men known as "self committers." That is, they have had themselves committed to the public institutions while out of employment.
 One of these was put in charge of a contagious case for the first time.
 "Remember, Clancy," said the doctor, "this case must be isolated."
 "All right, sorr," was the reply.
 "Where will I get the ice?"—New York World.
