

GARDEN LOVERS---READ

In no other line has there been greater progress made in regard to improved varieties as in the old garden favorite, the Phlox. Wonderful improvements as to size of flowers, beautiful colors as well as free flowering habits have been the result of the patient work of the Hybridizers of England, France and Germany.

Last spring the Henry A. Dreer Co. of Philadelphia send to Mr. W. C. Egan the noted Horticulturist of Highland Park a collection of 65 distinct varieties of Phlox comprising a good many hundreds of plants for the purpose of growing them on for the Annual Show of the Garden Club of Illinois. No finer show of Phlox was ever had any where, the individual flowers of some of the varieties covering a silver dollar with a good margin to their credit and in shades of the purest white and softest flesh pink to the deepest red.

We were fortunate indeed in being able to purchase at a great expense the entire collection and shall have plants for sale of this stock in a short time. This should prove once more to our patrons that we leave nothing undone to secure the latest and best in every thing for the beautifying of the Home Ground. You needn't send East for your requirements in the way of hardy plants for every thing that is good and of real value for our climatic conditions we carry and sell as reasonable as it is possible to do.

Besides all this you have the benefit of our experience in matters pertaining to Horticulture. A chat over 85 will give you any information you'd like to get--it's free, whether about your trees, the lawn, the flower border, the shrubs, the garden walks or drives, maybe a little sketch or estimate of what you want to have done, let's help you with suggestions--if we are able to assist you even if you don't buy a penny's worth we shall have your good Will and that is bound to prove of values to us--Some Day--

Highland Park Greenhouses

We think of nothing else but to make things beautiful outdoors--if given half a chance we can transform a barren Field into a lovely Garden of Roses. Maybe that's why to us everything looks so rosy.

Candidate for County Treasurer

Subject to the Decision of the Republican
Primaries, September 9th, 1914.
Your Support Respectfully Solicited.

HIS PLATFORM

If chosen to represent the Republican Party for the office of County Treasurer, and if elected, I will accept, as remuneration for my whole time and the best business administrative ability I possess, the salary allowed by the County Board of Supervisors as full pay. I will turn into the County Treasury, as earnings of the office, every penny received from interest on public monies, inheritance tax fees or any other source. I believe the salary allowed by the Board is ample compensation and am willing to give the work my best attention without thought of any perquisite.

I solicit the support of everyone in the county who wants honest and efficient administration of the public business.

TRICK OF THE FUNNEL

Blowing Out a Light Through it is Easy if You Know How.

To blow out a candle, using a funnel to blow through, seems a ridiculously easy thing to do. But ask any friend of yours to try it and see what happens. Ten to one he will try to blow through the cup so as to force his breath through the narrow neck of the funnel. As this is not an easy thing to do he will flatter himself and lose in his endeavors, while trying to force his face into the small cup. Then he will reverse the funnel and blow into the neck, and when he does not succeed in extinguishing the light he will blow harder and harder, and finally he will admit that he is beaten.

In blowing through the neck of the funnel he has directed the flame directly at the light, so that the flame is exactly opposite to the place where the neck of funnel joins the cup. You, on taking the funnel from him, incline the funnel so that its upper edge is on a level with the light. You blow gently. The light is extinguished at the first puff without any of the desperate effort which your friend put forth.

If you ponder a moment you will realize why you succeeded and why your friend failed. His breath on entering the cup or funnel spread in all directions, and the thin current of air was dispersed upward and downward, so that, as he heftily leveled the center of the funnel at the flame, no current of air ever reached it.

You, on the contrary, hold the upper wall of the funnel on a level with the flame. The current of air started by your breath, on reaching the edge of the wall, streamed onward in the direction given it by the restraining wall and on reaching the flame snuffed it out. --Boston American.

BRINGING DOWN A PICTURE.

Henner Had a Way of Making the Louvre Officials See the Light.

It is a pity that Henner is dead. He had found an excellent means to force the conservators at the Louvre to bring down the pictures that he judged had been placed too high. He made use of this method in the case of "Susanne au Bain" ("Susanna at the Bath") of Titoretto.

Twenty years ago this masterpiece was hung in the gallery four meters from the floor.

Henner was furious at this injustice. But he did not permit his anger to appear. He contented himself with coming from time to time in the morning before the visitors were numerous in the halls and in the most courteous tone requesting the keepers to furnish him a large double ladder.

The keepers referred the matter to the conservators, saying that this ladder was asked by M. Henner, and they were impressed with the necessity of responding to the wish of the old master.

Then he placed the ladder before Susanna, mounted the steps slowly and when at the top, remained a quarter of an hour absorbed in the contemplation of the marvelous painting.

He then descended as phlegmatically and, with a fine smile, said in his Alsatian jargon: "Merci pour l'escalier. Je suis tres content!" ("Thanks for the ladder. I am much pleased.")

He went through this maneuver half a dozen times at intervals.

At last the conservators understood. They had "Susanne au Bain" unhooked and gave it a place of honor in the square salon, where it is now. --Cri de Paris.

Tax on Hats.

Not only have hats at various times been subject to taxation, but have even been made the subject of special laws. Thus in Henry VII.'s reign none was allowed to sell hats at a larger price than 20 pence or caps for more than 2s. 8d.

Some compensation, however, for this interference with free trade could be found in the fact that in 1571 on Sundays and holidays every one above seven years of age was required to wear a cap of wool or English make under penalty of 3 farthings' fine for every day's neglect. --London Chronicle.

The Rabbit's Danger Signal.

So long as it sits still the ordinary rabbit is almost indistinguishable in a field of bracken, stubble or dry grass, but as soon as it begins to run toward its burrow the white patch on its tail betrays it. This white patch, which at first seems like a failure of adaptation, has its special function--it acts as a danger signal to the young rabbits and shows them the way by which they can escape from the threatened danger. --London Mail.

Farthest North Cities.

Dawson, the Yukon capital, and Fairbanks, its near Alaskan neighbor, are, next to Hammerfest, in Norway, the farthest north cities in the world, and at the latitudes of sixty-three and sixty-five have such comfortable appearances as electric lights, daily newspapers and pipe organs.

Not Like Him.

The Vicar--I'm surprised at you, Mings. Why, look at me. I can go into the town without coming back intoxicated. Mings--Yes, sir. But O! he is so popular. --London Telegraph.

Too Vigorous.

"Why are you prejudiced against golf? You never saw a game." "No; but I once heard part of one." --Judge.
