CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE
has an article on bird gardens in the city of Professor Wilhelm Miller of the University of Illinois which shows how Mr. Jensen finds his motives for landscape effects from a careful study of local conditions. The two bird gardens described are down in the residence portion of Chicago. Here Mr. Jensen has established food houses and bathing pools for birds, and belts of shrubbery and of trees to furnish shelter and attractive homes. Here privacy for birds and bird lovers is maintained in the very midst of a noisy city, and the gardens fitted out with the native growth of the very prairie in which they lie indicate a refinement of taste far removed from that which is responsible for the "garden of gaudy bedding" plants that is exposed to the gaze of every passer-by." Mr. Jensen's greatest work, however, is to be seen in the west parks of Chicago. Here "the motive of the prairie" prevailed in the embellishment of a real prairie landscape. All this must, of course, be seen to be appreciated. It is perhaps sufficient to say that in designing what is known as "the prairie river landscape" in Humbolt Park Mr. Jensen has not only enriched the resources of the people of Chicago but he has set a standard of landscape gardening which will influence similar work all over our country. It is a contribution to the preservation of American landscape. Professor Miller recently showed the writer a series of photographs taken in the west park system expressly to illustrate a forthcoming monograph on this style of landscape work which the University of Illinois is to publish.

Jesse L. Smith.
Concerning Fourth Class Postmaster August 13, 1914.

HIGHLAND PARK PRESS, Highland Park, Ill. Gentlemen:

I believe there is some misunderstanding abroad with reference to the exchanges that have been made recently in the office of postmaster at nearly all the postoffices of the fourth class.

Several years ago these officials were placed in the classified service by executive order of the President. After the present administration came into office, another executive order was issued directing that examinations be held for the filling of all offices of postmaster of the 4th class. Under the provisions of this last order, the United States Civil Service Commission held the examinations for the filling of all 4th class postmasterhips in Illinois, on April 18th last.

Following the holding of these examinations, the Civil Service Commission, as required by the law, certified to the post-office department the names of the three persons (if there were that many) who passed the highest in the examinations for each of the offices in question. The law gives the Postmaster General the privilege of appointing to the office in question, any one of these three who passed the highest in the examinations.

All the changes that have been made in 4th class postoffices have been under this executive order and have been brought about in the way I have explained; that is, by means of these examinations, and in no case has the change been brought about or affected in any way by the action of the member of congress from the district in which these offices are located.

I understand that some people in our district have had the impression that such changes in 4th class offices have been taken place in our district, have been brought about by me. As a matter of fact, I have had nothing whatever to do with the matter, and could not have had under the executive order referred to and under the Civil Service law. As a number of the offices in Lake County have been affected by the order in question, I will appreciate it if you will publish these facts so that the people may know why these changes have occurred and how they have been made.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES M. THOMPSON.
