

Education and Flowers

No Education is complete without including cultivation of the love for Flowers, Trees, Shrubs and the great Out Doors.

Music and Flowers go together, their language is universal, the higher a People are advanced in culture and thought, the greater is their need for both, the more will they appreciate their companionship in hours of Joy as well as Sorrow and the more will both help to create a brighter tomorrow for those to come after us.

What could there be more in Harmony in the surroundings of the Home, than beautiful Flowers, given the proper setting by the foliage of the Trees and Shrubs and the open sweep of lawn.

It is environments such as these which will make us all realize more than any thing else that this world after all is nothing more than what we make it, that no wrong can be made right by the force of arms, that happiness can not be bought with money and that the real pleasures of life can only be gotten out of the home and the loved ones in it.

Let's work and strive with this as our goal and all of the troubles and disappointments we may have during the busy day, or imagine we have, will appear as mere trifles.

Plant Peonias and Phlox, Columbines and Iris, the Larkspur and Lily and do it now, get ready, look forward this winter when the little Evergreens and Red Twigged Dog Wood stick their heads out of the banks of snow, for Spring to come and with it the Daffodils and Tulips, the Crocus and Snow Drops and all of the others which will bring good cheer and joy and remind you that we are here for just a little while, journeying along with these children of nature to make things pleasant for us. Enjoy them and if fortunate enough help others to do the same.

Woman's World

Mrs. Catt, Noted Suffrage Leader and Orator.

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is one of the most interesting and magnetic of the suffrage leaders. She began life as a teacher in Iowa, was superintendent of public schools at twenty-two years of age, went into the suffrage ranks as an active worker in 1883. Since then she has studied law and medicine and has the equipped mind of the woman who has traveled the world over studying conditions of women in all foreign lands. She is the president of the International Suffrage alliance and has addressed audiences in England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Saxony, Bohemia, Prussia, Hungary and in Africa and the far east. Everywhere the charm of her womanhood won her admiration, and when the alliance met in Stockholm three years ago she was called all over Scandinavia "America's uncrowned queen."

Mrs. Catt is an orator as well as organizer and a teacher of the suffrage school. Her written words bristle with oratory. She has spoken for the suffrage in every state in the Union save Florida, carrying her message before legislatures and constitutional conventions. On her return from Europe, where she has been attending a meeting of the International Suffrage alliance, she expects to take part in suffrage work in New York.

The Empire State campaign committee is making many plans for fall. After election representatives from every state in the Union whose women vote will assemble in New York. These women will be actual voters, women who have attained the standing of citizenship in their states and who have learned from actual experience what the privilege of the vote in their hands means. What they have learned they will endeavor to impress upon the doubting Thomases of the state.

QUEENLY KINDNESS.

How the Little Old Boot Seller Was Befriended by Queen Mary.

The kindness and consideration shown by Queen Mary recently endeared her still more to the hearts of the British public. Some time ago a firm of boot sellers, which for years had enjoyed royal patronage, dismissed their manager for no other reason than that he was too old.

He set up for himself in a small shop in a southwestern suburb and was hugely surprised and delighted when it was indicated to him that Queen Mary had heard of his dismissal and had resolved to transfer her patronage to him. And now the tiny shop sports the royal arms instead of the gorgeous premises from which the manager had been dismissed.

Removing Fruit Stains.

Fruit stains are now in order, and two, expert housekeepers have come forward with suggested remedies not generally known and yet labor saving.

The first is pure glycerin. The stain is to be moistened with it before the article stained is sent to the laundry. It is claimed to be quite effectual, and 20 cents' worth of glycerin ought to last a year.

The other remedy is spirits of camphor, applied as soon as possible or before the stain is wet with water or sent to the laundry.

Snap Fasteners For Neckwear.

The fashionable high standing collars and ruffles may be made removable. Instead of sewing the ruch or collar into the neck of the dress sew snaps every two or three inches along the facing of the neckpiece and the corresponding parts at equal distances on the neck of the dress. In this way a neckpiece may be quickly transferred to another dress or taken off when a dress is hung in the wardrobe or packed in a suit case.

FABRICS FOR EVENING.

Charming evening frocks are made altogether of net, dull rose or dull blue. Gray and white craquelé mesh lace is used with bright colored taffeta for evening gowns.

White net frocks are best for both weather dress occasions.

OLEANDERS OF BERMUDA.

In Summer Time They Fairly Run Riot Over the Islands.

Back in the fifties, when Anthony Trollope held a roving commission as postoffice inspector for the British government, he visited Bermuda, then practically unknown to any people save mariners. The distinguished author said some uncomplimentary things about the native Bermudians, much to their amusement, but he could not help praising the scenery of their island home and particularly the oleanders. He voted that Bermuda should be called the "Oleander Isles."

Curiously enough, Bermuda is better known as the home of the onion and the Easter lily, to say nothing of the potato and the rose, although the oleander is the most gorgeous and conspicuous shrub in the islands. Shrub is hardly the word to describe the oleander. It is really a tree, lifting its top twenty feet in the air and growing in thickets that the island planters use as screens or windbreaks.

In summer the hedges are covered with a profusion of pink, white and crimson blossoms that last well into the autumn and make great splashes of color on the hills and at the roadside. The oleander has no enemies. Animals refuse to touch it, and the tree runs its riotous way all over the islands. Those who visit Bermuda only in winter miss the glory of the oleander blossoms and also many of the other gorgeous flowers. While there is plenty of bloom in the winter months, the array of flowers is even greater in summer.—New York Post.

A Kind Wish For Mother.

The five-year-old found his mother looking a bit unhappy.

"Have you a pain, muvver?" he asked sympathetically. When she nodded he thought a minute and then exclaimed:

"I wish a fairy would come and turn your pain into a piece of cake." Then the small boy asserted himself over the angel child, adding, "And I would eat it."—New York Sun.

One of the Family.

Stranger—I notice your name is De Maryon. Are you related to the wealthy De Maryons of Belgravia?

Poor but Respectable De Maryon—I am, a—distant relative, sir.

"Indeed! How distant?"

"Well, sir, as distant as they can keep me!"

What Rules the World.

When Napoleon caused the names of his dead soldiers to be inscribed on the face of Pompey's pillar some one criticized the act as "a mere bit of imagination." "That is true," replied Napoleon, "but imagination rules the world."
