LAKE COUNTY TITLE TO HIGHLAND PARK

REGULARS DEFEAT WAUKEGAN EASILY

Both Teams Away off Color, Making a Great Many Miscues, Curtain Falls on Base-Ball for Season of 1914

By "Regular Fan"
The H. P. Regulars celebrated the closing of the baseball season for 1914 by cleanly winning Sunday's game at Waukegan by the score of 11 to 7, making it two straight from Waukegan for the championship of Lake County. This last game was unquestionably the worst game of the entire series. Errors were very frequent on both sides and were partly responsible for the large score. Sykes was on the mound for the Regulars and pitched a good game although Waukegan accumulated eleven safe hits off his delivery, which had it not been for the errors, would have netted Waukegan but two runs. Neimeyer started for McCann's team and was wild, issuing four passes, hitting one batsman and heaving one ball to the stand before he was taken out in favor of Wilcox who passed the first man he faced. All this happened in the first inning and gave the Regulars four runs. Wilcox remained in the box until the eighth during which time the Champions added four more runs to their total. Lindquist relieved Wilcox and proved another wild man and before the inning was over the Highland Parkers scored three more runs, bringing their total to eleven, Neimeyer came back in the ninth and the locals went out in order. In all the Regulars were given fourteen free trips to first, thirteen on passes and one on a dead ball. This with nine bingles mixed up with eight errors netted them the eleven runs, had it not been for the errors they would have earned seven tallies. Manager McCann used all the strength he had in trying to down the Regulars using thirteen players in the attempt, but it was of no use as the peppery Regulars are too much for Waukegan.

In closing a very successful season both on the field and financially, Manager Maroney and the Regulars wish to heartily thank the baseball fans for their loyal support during the season of 1914, and express their intentions of giving the fans the opportunity of seeing one of the best amateur teams on the circuit for the season of 1915.

22-YEAR-OLD GIRL ROUTS BURGLAR
Helen Welch Finds Man in House When She Arrived From School
Yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when 12-year-old Helen Welch, daughter of John Welch of W. Park Ave., arrived home from school, she heard a noise upstairs, and thinking it was her mother, called to her and asked her why she had not gone to Chicago, but received no reply, whereupon she hunted up an old revolver belonging to her father and started up to investigate. She found a man in a bedroom with a few trinkets of jewelry he had picked up from the dresser. At the point of the revolver she forced him to drop the articles and leave the house, when he made his get-away.

NEW BARTLETT THEATRE OPENED

Building Unusually Attractive. Large Crowds Attend. Excellent Pictures Shown
The new Bartlett theatre on Waukegan Ave., Highland Park, which opened last week is proving a great success. Mr. Bartlett, proprietor, announces that nothing but first class pictures will be shown. The building is an attractive structure, the interior of which is very comfortable as well as artistic and is of colonial type. The ventilation in this building is perfect and the seating capacity is about three hundred and eighty. The orchestra consists of two pieces, piano and drums.

WAUKEGAN CHILD SERIOUSLY BURNED

Mexico Nuns at Sacred Heart, Lake Forest, Car Runs off Track over Genesee St. Viaduct. Commends Board of Review

Mexico Nuns at Sacred Heart
Nine priests of the Passionists and twenty-five nuns of the Order of the Sacred Heart recently reached Chicago, having escaped from Mexico after undergoing hardships and being in danger of losing their lives on several occasions. The priests, all of whom are Spaniards, are housed at the headquarters of the Passionists at North Harlem and Talcoits Ave., Norwood Park. The nuns are at the Academy of the Sacred Heart in Lake Forest.

Car Runs off Track
A defective switch point on the new tracks over the Genesee St. viaduct, Waukegan, was the cause of the derailment of a street car at 11 o'clock Friday night. The car left the switch at the north end of the bridge and went bumping over the ties for several feet. The wrecking car and crew arrived shortly after the time of the accident. The workmen worked nearly all night in replacing the car on the tracks. The switch point, it is said, was defective. When the car attempted to pass over it, it leaped from the rails and plowed over the ties. The motor-man succeeded in stopping the car before it had run many feet.

Child Seriously Burned
Little Sayne Harris, two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Harris who reside in the Arnold apartments, Waukegan was severely, perhaps fatally scalded on Sunday night about seven o'clock when she pulled a pot of boiling soup off the kitchen stove and was drenched from head to foot. The child's condition is regarded as serious.

Commends Board of Review
From the way the board of review this year raised the total assessed valuation of property in Lake county, it doesn't appear as if it is necessary for any judicial candidate or any other person to urge the necessity of doing something to bring about a different sort of board. Such a raise must have been made in an effort to equalize taxes—and the board acted of its own initiative, did its work and evidently did lots of work. The members of the board were: James G. Welch of Newport, Editor Udell of Highland Park and William Ward, Waukegan.

Large Real Estate Deals
Two large deals in Lake Forest acres have been closed by John Griffith. He has sold for the Gallagher estate to Ernest M. Bowman a tract of eighty acres on the Five Points road, between Telegraph and Green Bay roads, about four miles north of Lake Forest. He has also sold to W. T. Fenton, vice president of the National Bank of the Republic, what is known as the McClue farm of eighty acres on Telegraph road, adjoining the property purchased by Mr. Bowman. The consideration is not disclosed in either transaction, and it also is said that no plans are had for improving, although it is thought eventually handsome country homes will be constructed by the purchasers.—Waukegan Sun

FIRST STREET BEING CLEANED UP

Communication from Business Men's Association to City Council has Effect
In answer to the communication from the Business Men's Association to the city council regarding the unsightly condition of the parkways on First St., between Central Ave. and Elm Place, the police have been instructed to enforce the ordinance prohibiting the use of parkways or streets for storage of vehicles, old wagons, trucks, etc., and good results have been obtained. Warrants were issued for four violators, but all have responded by removing their belongings.

MRS. JOSEPH L. FEARING PASSES AWAY OCT. 8th

FUNERAL IN CHICAGO LAST SATURDAY

Interment at Her Old Home in Macon, Ga. Contribution from "G. L. F." and Clipping from "Macon Telegraph"

Contributed by "G. L. F."
It is with most sincere regret that we announce the death of Iola Lamar Munroe, beloved wife of Joseph Lea Fearing, and daughter of Nathan C. Munroe and Iola Lamar of Macon Georgia. She passed away very peacefully at the Henrotin Hospital in Chicago on Thursday evening October the eight 1914.
She combined to a rare degree the fine qualities of courage and great executive ability, with unusual sweetness of disposition thus endearing herself to all who knew her. Her many friends mourn with her sorrowing husband and children.
The funeral services were held Saturday in the church of the Ascension, Episcopal, in Chicago at ten-thirty o'clock, Dr. P. C. Wolcott officiating. Mrs. Fearing was laid at rest in Rose Hill Cemetery Macon, Georgia on Monday, Oct. 12th.

We Who Mourn
From Macon, Ga., Telegraph
Only those who knew and loved Iola Munroe Fearing can realize how great a sorrow her death has brought to the hearts of the family and friends; or how empty the lives of those she loved will be without her womanly ministrations and tender care.

From a child she had the God-given power of making friends and the still rarer gift of holding them. Born in the south under bright skies, her whole nature was steeped in sunshine and her soul was big and unafraid. Her life was dedicated to the ministry of love, and no sacrifice was too great for her heart to offer on the altar of love's service.
Happily married in early young womanhood to Joseph Lea Fearing, she moved to Chicago, where she made warm friends and left the warm impress of her lofty womanhood on all questions that meant the uplift of life's standards.

Her life was blessed with five children three sons and two daughters, and to husband and children and friends she gave lavishly of her rich intelligence, womanly poise and unselfish devotion. No one ever came to her heart-hungry without being fed from the rich stores of her loving nature.
She was laid to rest on the sunny slopes of Rose Hill, and only God can measure the desolation of the hearts that mourn for her and God only can comfort the husband and children, the relatives and friends who are bereft of her tenderness and love.

SINCERE CONDOLENCE TO MR. FEARING

By Members of Trinity Auxiliary and Guild at Their Opening Meeting Monday
At the opening meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Trinity Guild in the Parish house last Monday, a unanimous vote was taken that a note of sympathy be written to Mr. J. L. Fearing by the secretary of the Women's Auxiliary as well as the secretary of Trinity Guild, expressing their deep sorrow in the death of Mrs. Fearing, and offering their sincere condolence to Mr. Fearing and his family. Expressions of appreciation of Mrs. Fearing's lovely character and of the good work that she has had done in the various outside charities connected with the parish were voiced by the president of the Auxiliary and the Guild.

A COLUMN FOR THE USE OF EVERYBODY

MRS. JONES WRITES ON VISITING NURSE

To be Supported by the School Boards, the Women's Clubs, the Relief and Aid Society and City Council

The work of the visiting nurse is one with all agencies that are endeavoring to better community conditions. It is just as important to keep the people well as it is to cure the sick. In fact, the proverbial ounce of prevention may be said to be the universal slogan of champions of better living in the social, industrial and political fields as well as public health. The tendency of the times is to go back to the source of all evils and endeavor to check those evils where they originate. In order to do this efficiently, some organized form of supervision is necessary. No individual is sufficient unto himself. Unless community conditions are right there can be no certainty that the individuals condition is right. The welfare of the one is closely dependant, upon the other.

Our local Board of Health has rendered a fine service to the city in the sane, skillful manner with which they have handled contagion in Highland Park. By careful inspection it has been quietly nipped in the bud many times. To this Board a visiting nurse would be invaluable. She not only could supplement their watchful care in the schools but she would naturally have access to many houses where the doctor is not considered necessary. So many times parents undertake to prescribe for some apparently trifling symptoms when the intelligent eye of a nurse would detect reasons for professional attention. In homes where the services of a regular trained nurse are financially prohibitive she could visit daily to care for the invalid or aged who might otherwise lack for those gentle ministrations that mean so much to the weak and ill.

Aside from her great value as a guardian of the public health she would be able to systematize the philanthropies of the city to a fine business basis. There would be little chance of the professional mendicant living off the bounties of a half dozen different charitable organizations. There would furthermore be greater possibilities of placing material help where there was the greatest need. There is bound to be much running around in circles over the same ground where there are many agencies organized for the same purpose. Why not concentrate forces and eliminate such a waste of energies? The intelligent, discerning supervision of a visiting nurse would be of tremendous value to the economic side of administering aid. "Order is Heaven's first law" and where it is lacking any more than in the indiscriminate philanthropy of today?

A visiting nurse in Highland Park, watching the schools, in touch with the shut-ins, observing the methods of handling and housing food and directing the city's benevolence; supported by all the School Boards, the Women's Clubs, the Relief and Aid Society and the city council would mean a better state of public health, a better standard of community conditions, a better means of caring for the unfortunate and a better spirit of cooperative citizenship.

WOMAN TAKES HER OWN LIFE

By Taking Poison. Dies Tuesday in a Waukegan Hospital
Miss Mary Sullivan, a second maid in the employ of Mrs. Dixon Miller of Deerfield, died in a Waukegan hospital Tuesday. Her death was caused by taking poison. An inquest was held in Waukegan Wednesday morning.
The coroner's jury returned a verdict after exhaustive evidence to the effect that Mary Sullivan came to her death as a result of taking poison, the exact nature of which is unknown. Coroner Taylor opened the victim's stomach to determine what sort of poison she may have taken. When he finished, the report was that it looked like wood alcohol poisoning, but he couldn't determine for certainty. Henry Strang was foreman of the jury.

HOUSE ADOPTS REPORT ON THE CLAYTON BILL

HAS 50 AMENDMENTS BEFORE PASSAGE

Congressman Thomson Says That the Bill in its Final Form has More Desirable Than Undesirable Legislation in it

(By Chas. M. Thomson)
The last step in the enactment by Congress of the main anti-trust bill which has been before it for many months, was taken on Thursday last, when the House adopted the Conference Report on the Clayton Bill. That bill passed the House some months ago. The Senate thrashed it over for many weeks, finally passing it with over fifty amendments. The House declined to agree to all of those amendments and, therefore, the bill was sent to a conference committee consisting of certain Members of the Senate and others from the House. That Committee worked over the amendments in question for two or three weeks more, the Senate Conference receding from the position the Senate had taken on some of the amended sections and the House Conference receding from the position the House had taken as to other amended sections. When the conference committee had reached an agreement (by the vote of a majority of the committee) on all disputed matters, they made their report to both the Senate and the House. Under the rules, the Senate was required to act on this conference report before the House took it up. After several days' argument the Senate adopted the report and advised the House of their action late on Tuesday afternoon. An agreement was immediately made in the House, by unanimous consent, to take the report up on Wednesday. Arguments for and against the adoption of the conference report by the House occupied all of Wednesday and most of Thursday, the vote being reached late on the second day. I voted for the adoption of the report. From what I have said, in very briefly describing the course of this measure through Congress, it can be seen that the final result presented by such a measure, as embodied in the bill in the form in which it goes to the President for his approval or disapproval, is one arrived at by compromise.

In Congress, as elsewhere, are to be found those who would hesitate at no extreme in a fight against the trusts. They do not care much how the trusts are smashed just so they are smashed! There are others who deny the existence of any distinction between a trust or monopoly and what may be described as large business units. To them the cardinal business sin is in getting too big and powerful. They would remedy the ills of the business world by forcing a breaking up of all large corporations into comparatively small units. In still another group we find those who say that the cure for business ills is to be found in the operation of universal economic laws which work while you sleep and are largely unaffected by the efforts of legislative bodies and they would advocate letting business take its economic course unhampered by legislative attempts to control it. Expressed in a word, their cry is "Let well enough alone."

In still another group are to be found those who contend that economic laws are all right and might result in equity to everybody in business if they were allowed to take their course, but that as these laws are warped and manipulated by the sure a very different result is reached, selfishness and greed of human nature.

STERRETT BEATEN BY 68 VOTES

Friends Urge Him to File Petition for Recount of Ballots
Assistant State's Attorney Malcolm B. Sterrett, of Evanston, who was a Democratic candidate for the nomination for Congress in the 10th congressional district at the recent primary is shown by the official canvass of the tally sheets, to be defeated by sixty-eight votes. He is being urged by his friends to file a petition for a recount of the ballots. They assert that such a recount would show Sterrett to be the winner by two hundred plurality. The vote, as shown by the canvass, is as follows:
John F. Waters, 2,228; Malcolm B. Sterrett, 2,160; Frederick Dunham, 1,617; Dr. P. J. Farrell, 1,191; James McGillen, 1,975.
Mr. Sterrett carried Lake County, and most of the county towns in Cook County. In the Chicago wards, Waters and Sterrett ran about even, except in the 25th ward, where Mr. Waters' plurality was nearly three hundred votes. It is in this ward that Mr. Sterrett insists several important errors occurred.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL IN AUTUMN COLORING

AS SEEN BY PROF. JESSE L. SMITH

Viburnums and Dogwoods are True Cinderella's and They Come into Their Own With Their Fine Colors

(By Jesse L. Smith)
The hand of fate is heavy upon one who could wander about Highland Park these days and not be stirred in spirit by the autumn display of foliage. Every street has been decorated, every vista is in color, and where as a rule, man has interfered least with nature, the decorations are most complete and attractive. Many a neglected spot glows with color. Undisturbed bits of wood land shame us with nature's fine composition and arrangement of foliage masses to all of which one's attention is now attracted by daring and wonderful schemes of color.

It is a good time to go afoot. Riding is a kindergarten form of observing nature and the swifter it is, the more elementary and crude the observation. Nature has much more for the red-blooded person who walks. He gets the real drama, while he who rides gets a "Movie." Nature is a sort of nickel-show to the speeder. He who goes slow develops a capacity for enjoyment, but this enjoyment must be earned. It is worth it.

Think what there is to see afoot! There was until lately the orange and scarlet of the sumac, of course, and the subtle purples and red brown of the ash leaves. The slow deepening of tint in the ash leaf is one of the marvels of nature. Most of the ash trees, however, have already lost their foliage as have the hickories that lately dropped their dull yellow leaf masses and now stand bare for winter. The foliage of the maples showed the effect of the dry weather but they yet make some wonderful pictures in the landscape. One on the ravine slope near the bridge on North St. Johns avenue is so notable that it might well be famous. For the benefit of some people who value highly, only those things which are expensive, it would be well to charge a fee for crossing the bridge and looking down upon that particular maple. Just beyond the bridge, too, is a clump of American horn beams that have escaped the axe man's attention. These are completely clothed in deep scarlet, leaf and drooping tallies like fruit as well. Then there are oaks and willows and masses of dog-wood and witch-hazel and much else besides all of which is to be had by going to that one place in Highland
