

BAHR'S FLOWER SHOW

We know enough about Flowers to tell you that you are missing a whole lot if you fail to accept our invitation to pay the Greenhouses a visit. Every lover of Flowers should take advantage of it.

We don't want you to buy, for that part isn't worrying us in the least, but we would like to have you see about 3000 of the finest Chrysanthemums ever shown anywhere in the country.

Over 300 people visited our Greenhouses last Sunday and we look forward to as many again this coming Sunday and we would like to have you among them. Bring the kids and spend a half hour, let's tell you how we grow the flowers, let's show you how much there is to do to get a show like this ready, it's all so interesting.

There are larger Florist establishments all over the country but none where better stock is grown and for the next two weeks "Queen Chrysanthemum will Reign Supreme" here, it's the event of the year.

Come over and see the finest Carnations ever shown, the pot Chrysanthemums, the Bouvardias, the Cyclamens and the Palms and Ferns.

Bear in mind that we can ship these grand Chrysanthemums anywhere East or West. When properly packed they travel 2500 miles and get there in good condition.

For the Children

A Prize Winner at the Asbury Park Baby Parade.

Every year at Asbury Park, that delightful beach on New Jersey's shore, is given a baby parade. This baby parade is the main feature of the season's jollifications and is witnessed by thousands. People from all parts of the country make it a point to be present at Asbury Park's baby parade, and they are always repaid for their journey. Hundreds of prizes are given in a great number of classes, but perhaps the most interesting exhibits are those dressed in burlesque costumes. The first prize winner this year was Ralph B. Moore of New York city. Ralph is four years old and was represented as a war veteran who had seen hard times. The present war in Europe no doubt induced Ralph's parents to present him as a war worn soldier. "After the War" his makeup was called. While his costume was a burlesque, it is sad to think that it very nearly approached the appearance of many real soldiers now in Europe. Little folks happily do not know much about the horrors of warfare.

Games of Initials.
This is a jolly game, requires no preparation and makes lots of fun. The guests sit in a circle around the room. One sits in a revolving chair in the center of the circle so that he can easily face any one in the room. "Ladies and gentlemen," he begins. "I am here for criticism, advice and condemnation. I am not sensitive and it doesn't matter what I get, but the principal words of your answers must begin with my initials, J. C. P." Turning to the first player, he says: "What sort of a chap am I?"

"Jaunty, carefree and fresh," might be answered.

To the next one he asks, "What sort of a wife ought I to have?"

"Jolly, crisp and flirty," would be a rather appalling description. Questions and answers might go on somewhat after this fashion:

Q. "What ought I to eat?"
A. "Jam, custard and fish."

Q. "What profession am I best fitted for?"
A. "Janitor, carpenter or fisherman."

Q. "What other business would I succeed in?"
A. "Judge, commercial lawyer or financier."

And so on as long as questions and answers can be thought of. When a person fails to make an answer he must change places with the questioner and give his own initials, then proceed to ask questions about himself.

No question is allowed on any other subject or about any one else. Two minutes will be allowed for thinking of an answer, but it is more fun to answer quickly and keep the game lively.

A Spanish Game.
The "game of Alea," a favorite game among the children of Spain, is much like "London Bridge." "Moon and the morning stars" is their game of tag. One child is chosen for the moon and has to stay within the shadow. The other children, who are the stars, have to stay only where it is light. If the moon catches a child in the forbidden shadow the child takes the place of the moon. Then as the stars dance and run around in and out of the shadow they sing:

"Oh, the moon and the morning stars!
Oh, the moon and the morning stars!
Who dares to tread, oh,
Within the shadow!"

Phonetic Word Building.
Outside I heard a gentle —, and laying down my —, I called up to my brother — and said, "I'll need some help from —." He laughingly said, "O —" and ran down and stood the post — the whole word.

Answer—"urr, pen, Dick, you, la-perpendicular."

Luck, Pluck.
"I wish you good luck," is no word to say.
"I wish you good pluck," is better. For pluck means more in every way than just an additional letter.

It is good to believe in your luck, I know: It is bad to be thought unlucky; But the best of luck for us folk below is the habit of being plucky.

You can turn your luck if you have the pluck.
You can conquer the ill that shakes it So I will not stop at a wish for luck, But here's to your pluck that makes it!

BANKUTU CANNIBALS.

A Belgian Congo Savage Tribe That Cannot Be Subdued.

The cannibal Bankutus of Belgian Congo make a practice of removing the upper incisors. Their dress consists of a plaited skirt, which does not quite meet on the right thigh. But the women of the south wear a hide girdle with a deep fringe of palm fiber string. Among this tribe the slaves are compelled to wear a special dress, which is, in fact, the ordinary costume of the Ahele, to which tribe most of them belong. The Bankutus are great cannibals as far as the male members of the tribe are concerned, and the victims are always slaves. In fact, all slaves are ultimately eaten, since it is believed that if a slave were buried his ghost would kill his master.

Their chief weapon is the bow, poison being used on the arrows. Shields are now obsolete. One of their most interesting points is their use of a conventional throwing knife as currency. The Bankutus are almost the only tribe of this region who have been successful in resisting the advance of the white man. This fact is due to their skill in forest warfare. The way leading to their village is defended by poisoned spikes hidden by leaves. They use bows and arrows set like traps in the form of primitive spring guns and are quite ready if a white man is expected to bait such traps with a live baby being sure that the European will be unable to resist the temptation to pick up an apparently abandoned child. The poison they use is absolutely deadly.

THE CHANGING TIDES.

Causes That Contribute to the Rise and Fall of the Ocean.

Many people regard the rise and fall of the ocean as a profound and baffling mystery.

The mystery really is not very hard to understand. As we all know, the surface of the ocean rises and falls twice in every lunar day, this rise or peaking along a coast to be a horizontal motion—always ebbing or flowing. Note, the lunar day consists of about twenty-five hours. Thus, of course, the "time" of the tides varies each day. The tides, moreover, do not always rise to the same height. Every fortnight with the new and full moon, they rise very much higher than at other times. These high tides are called "spring" tides, the alternating low tides being termed "neap." When the moon is nearest to the earth the rise and fall of the ocean are markedly increased. Thus the spring tides are greatest at the equinoxes—i. e., at the end of March and the end of September.

Yes, you say, but what has the moon to do with it at all? Surely it is the sun which attracts the earth.

That is so. But, although the sun's attraction on the earth is far greater than the moon's, the moon is so very much nearer to the earth that the difference between its attraction at the center and on the surface is three times as great as the sun's. And it is this difference which causes tides.—London Answers.

A Trick of Oratory.

Victor Murdock says that the best advice he ever received in regard to public speaking was from a truck driver. After making one of his maiden speeches in Kansas he was being driven to the railway station by the polite liverman.

"Like the speech?" asked Victor. "Yes," answered the driver, "only you'd get more hand claps if you'd always put the names at the last when you say anything."

Victor didn't understand, so the driver explained:

"You spoke of Henry Clay and Grant and James G. Blaine and then went on to tell about what they did. You ought to go over the things they did and then say, 'That's what was done by Clay and Grant and James G. Blaine.' Always put the names last, and the crowd'll take more interest."—New York Sun.

Long Lived Ships.

If the life of the old man-of-war was longer than that of the present Dreadnought the old merchantman lived longer still. The Lively, for instance, when wrecked at Croner in 1888, had been afloat two years over a century. The Liberty, too, built at Whitby in 1750, was in regular use till 1850, and the Betsy Cairns, which began life as a frigate and ended as a collier, went down in her one hundred and thirty-seventh year. And in 1882 according to a daily paper, the Anita, then trading between Spain and America, dated from the days of Columbus.—London Standard.

On the Safe Side.

"If you were a bird what sort would you rather be?"
"Why, an eagle. He's so majestic!"
"What sort of bird would you rather be?"

"I guess I'd rather be a jaybird."
"The deuce! Why a jaybird?"
"I've never seen a jaybird shut up in a zoo."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

It Would Make a Difference.

Schoolmaster—Now, if your mother were to give you a large apple and a small one and told you to divide with your brother, which apple would you give him? Johnny—D'you mean my big brother or my little brother?—London Tit-Bits.

Faint Praises.

"Is the boy trustworthy?"
"I consider him so. I'd trust him as far as I could see him. Of course I'm mighty nearsighted."—
