

THE MASTER KEY

CHAPTER XVII. The Forged Deeds.

WHEN the train pulled into Los Angeles the next morning John Dorr's party got off and John left Ruth with Tom Kane while he went to engage an automobile to take them to Beverly Hills, a suburb recommended by Everett as quiet and restorative for shattered nerves.

As they stood there Wilkerson, Mrs. Darnell and Estelle also got off the train, still disguised, and were hurrying away when Wilkerson observed Ruth and called Jean's attention to her.

For an instant she was nonplussed. Then she said in a low tone: "So much the better. We can keep an eye out on them."

"I must find out where they are going to," Wilkerson returned. "I don't like the looks of it."

He soon came back with word that they had ordered the car to take them to Beverly Hills.

After some inquiry Wilkerson found the address of a hotel that seemed to answer their requirements, and they were soon on their way thither in a taxi. Within an hour the deft Estelle had installed herself and her mistress in a comfortable suite. Wilkerson took a room near by. Then came the question of their disguises.

"There is no need of wearing them any longer," Wilkerson stated. "It need be we can put them on again."

Mrs. Darnell laughed scornfully. "Yes, and all the hotel people saw us come in with our disguises on. What will they think if they see entirely different people occupying these rooms?"

Wilkerson had already started to remove his makeup. Now he paused. But his reckless nature got the better

"Those are called spats, Tom," said John, smiling. "That eyeglass is a monocle."

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I reckoned he was near sighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough, Ruth blushed at this. Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly; not that Sir Donald had been in the slightest offensive. He had merely silently testified by respectful glances his appreciation of the arrival of a very pretty woman.

John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly. He, too, had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy. He had so long been alone in Ruth's regard that he had not analyzed his own feelings toward her. He determined that Sir Donald Faversham should not impose his company on them.

The very next morning, when Ruth and John came out from the hotel ready for a stroll, Faversham lay in wait for the old cook and asked him in wait for the old cook and asked him to reach into his waistcoat pocket and pulled out a bunch of black matches, which he handed out with an air of doing a service to some one he could not see. Sir Donald looked at the queer matches, not knowing the peculiarities of the western sulphur article, and in spite of himself Kane had to instruct him to pull out one of the matches and strike it. When Sir Donald choked and sputtered over an inability of brimstone Tom looked profoundly concerned.

"They're a little strong for some people," he remarked pityingly. "Strong?" answered Faversham, wiping his eyes. "I should jolly well say they were!"

Their conversation had attracted Ruth's attention, and she and John both looked back. John smiled faintly, but Ruth was indignant.

"Tom did that on purpose," she said. "I'm ashamed of him."

How it happened only Sir Donald could have told, but within three minutes he was exchanging remarks about the scenery with them all. "And there's an awfully jolly bit just over the other way," he said to Ruth.

The ice was broken, and Ruth promptly accepted the implied invitation to see this specially lovely scene and Sir Donald led the way, talking with her. After an instant's hesitation John and Kane followed.

The acquaintance thus made was destined to have a great bearing on the lives of both Ruth and John. It had ripened into a genuine liking on Ruth's part before the dance that night was over.

The next morning John and Tom met Ruth walking with Sir Donald about the hotel grounds, and the young man could not help showing in both voice and manner that he was little pleased that Ruth should have so suddenly taken up with a stranger.

"Remember, she's only a girl," Tom warned him, feeling his mood. "She's been brought up in the mountains, and she's as friendly as a pup. I don't like the way the firm puts petticoats on his feet and I don't want to be looked at with two eyes. But Ruth is all right. You must remember that young as she is and inexperienced, she has a good lot of common sense."

"I suppose it's foolish of me," John answered. "But I'm used to activity, and this dawdling about doesn't suit me and that makes me generally cross and unreasonable. If I only knew what Wilkerson was doing, if Everett would only come!"

The wish was fulfilled that afternoon when George Everett turned up and was warmly greeted by both Kane and Dorr. After a few words he asked for Ruth.

"You can see that she's all right," John answered quietly, pointing to her as she came up the steps with Sir Donald. Both were in tennis garb, and Ruth was delightfully flushed.

Sir Donald made a few pleasant remarks and then excused himself. His quick senses told him that Everett had come on business and that he would be one too many.

"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine, but we must have the deeds, papers and surveys first. And they're gone. I understand."

"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly. "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the discouragement on her face. He went quickly on: "However, I've made ten porary arrangements which will relieve you of all trouble for the present. Miss Gallion. I'll talk over the business details with John and Tom Kane."

She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I knew everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. At last his task was done.

"No one can ever prove that old Tom Gallion didn't draw that deed himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the 'Master Key' mine, Jean. And, once in charge I'll make us both worth millions. Then—"

She shrank back at the flame in his gaze upon her.

"Now, what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels.

He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out all right," he told her. "You see, Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case, and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do? He can see what's going on and warn us."

"Dorr and the rest are still at Beverly Hills," she inquired.

"Sure," he said scornfully. "They're tying up with some bloated Britisher they think has money. They figure on getting him to finance them. I reckon. And I happen to know that Sir Donald couldn't finance anybody. We needn't worry about Dorr."

Mrs. Darnell remained in thoughtful silence awhile and then agreed to the suggestion. Wilkerson immediately wrote the message:

Charles Drake, San Francisco, Cal.: Go to Silent Valley at once and take charge of "Master Key" mine until you hear further from me. Am wiring Tubbs, engineer, to this effect.

HARRY WILKERSON.

When he had sent this and a message to Tubbs he resumed his gloating contemplation of his forged deeds. He did not see the look of burning scorn on Jean's face as she left the room.

"Why must I always have to use foulies?" she murmured bitterly. "A lovely pair—Wilkerson and Drake!"

Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram. He took the next train for Silent Valley and on arrival there procured a rig and drove to the mine.

On his arrival he was dismayed to see that no work was being done. The machinery was idle, and the miners were loafing about the streets or gathered in little sullen groups. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tubbs they made no comment nor asked any questions.

Following their directions, he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked, and there was shuffling of heavy boots; then the door opened, and an unshaven, bloated faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted.

Drake produced Wilkerson's wire, and instantly the engineer showed relief.

"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink!"

The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his new quarters without regard to the decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and shared a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him.

"There ain't no money to pay the men; the stove's closed; the cook shanty ain't running; Wilkerson is away; Dorr hasn't turned up with the money he promised, and I'm just kind of sitting on the lid while the pot boils. I'm mighty glad to see you. Maybe you can do something with these fellows. I've done my best, and I can't do any more."

The words were hardly out of his mouth before there was the noise of boots on the porch, and Tubbs smiled in sickly fashion.

"I guess they spotted you rich out," he said.

"What do they want?" demanded Drake as there came a pounding on the door.

Two miners entered, and Tubbs introduced them to Drake.

"This is the new boss, boys," he said. "Who sent you here?" was the first question asked.

"Wilkerson," responded Drake. "Humph!"

"I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice.

The other man took this information and after digesting it said, "Going to start up and pay wages?"

"I'm not acquainted with the situation yet," was the evasive reply. "I'll go over things with Mr. Tubbs tonight, and then in the morning I'll see what is to be done."

"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to look at Tubbs in some dismay.

The engineer was so relieved at having some one else to bear the burden of responsibility that he refused to be worried.

"Have another drink, partner," he said familiarly, "and forget it till tomorrow."

After a very poor meal which Tubbs scraped up the two sat down and smoked. Tubbs' tongue gradually loosened under the influence of many more drinks, and before 10 o'clock brought up a wailing moon Drake knew a great deal that made him uncomfortable. He resolved to shift the burden to Wilkerson's shoulders as quickly as possible.

The next morning did not bring cheer. His head ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky, and the chill of the mountain air was not dissipated by a cold breakfast. And before the sun had risen above the peak of the mountain the miners had approached him with questions.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Battle in the Mine.

FOR an hour or so Drake evaded and tried to postpone action. But it was made plain to him that he could not avoid action. The starving men were in no humor for words. They demanded food and wages.

At last he saw that he must do something immediately. He called some of the leaders into the office and with apparent frankness told them he had known nothing of the situation and that he felt sure Wilkerson was unaware of it.

"What are you going to do?" came the demand.

"This," replied Drake, writing rapidly. He showed them the message: Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.: Come to mine at once. Trouble in brewing. DRAKE.

"Will that bring him?" demanded one of them coldly.

"It will. Now who will take it and send it?"

1915

Overland

$1075

The Advantages of Magneto Ignition

This new Overland is equipped with the finest high tension magneto.

—it keeps the motor cool.

This is entirely independent of the starting and lighting system.

—it develops more power due to a hotter spark, which increases its heat as the motor speed increases.

High tension magneto ignition is conceded by the great majority of experts and engineers to be the most efficient. Also it is the most expensive.

The heat of an Overland spark, by actual test, is ten times greater than the spark of the ordinary battery ignition.

All high-priced cars are equipped with a magneto.

The high tension Overland magneto requires no dry cells.

Most popular priced cars have no magneto. Only the cheaper and less effective battery ignition is furnished.

The absence of a high tension magneto on a car is an indication that the car is not all it should be. Something very important is lacking, consequently there might be many other important things left off, of which you are not aware.

Those manufacturers who use the battery ignition do so to cut down their manufacturing costs. They do not furnish a magneto because it is too costly.

The Overland has every practical and essential improvement.

A high tension magneto is furnished with the Overland because—

When you purchase an Overland you get the most stylish, most comfortable, most convenient, most complete and most carefully constructed car for the price in the world.

- it means a faster getaway.
—it means a livelier motor.
—it means more power at all speeds.

Model 80 Price: 8 Passenger Touring Car—$1075, 2 Passenger Roadster—$1025, 4 Passenger Coupe—$1000, All prices f. o. b. Toledo, Ohio.

Deerfield Garage

Tel. Deerfield 225-J KNAAK BROS., Props. Deerfield, Ill.

Model 80

Model 80 Price: 8 Passenger Touring Car—$1075, 2 Passenger Roadster—$1025, 4 Passenger Coupe—$1000, All prices f. o. b. Toledo, Ohio.

Final Special Assessment Notice

In the matter of the special assessment of the Village of Deerfield for a system of cast iron water mains which have been laid on the following streets:

A cast iron water pipe of 8 inches internal diameter on the north side of Deerfield Ave. from the east village limits to a point 660 feet east of the south quarter corner of Section 29, Township 43 North, Range 12, east of the Third Principal Meridian; on the west side of Lincoln Ave. from Fair Oaks Ave. to a point 1,500 feet south of Central Ave. On the north side of Hazel Ave. from Park Ave. to Lincoln Ave. A cast iron water pipe of 6 inches internal diameter on the east side of Park Ave. from Greenwood Ave. to Hazel Ave. On the north side of Fair Oaks Ave. from Park Ave. to Lincoln Ave. On the north side of Ostermann Ave. from Park Ave. to Lincoln Ave. On the north side of Central Ave. from Park Ave. to Lincoln Ave. On the north side of Fair Oaks Ave. from Park Ave. to Grand Ave. On the westerly side of Grand Ave. from Fair Oaks Ave. to the south end of Grand Ave. in the Village of Deerfield.

Docket No. 3 of the county court of Lake County.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested that the Board of Local Improvements of said village has heretofore filed in said court in said cause a certificate showing the cost of the work, the amount reserved for interest and of the cost of making and collecting said assessment, and also that the improvement has been constructed in substantial conformity to the requirements of the original ordinance therefor.

The hearing to consider and determine whether or not the facts as stated in said certificate are true will be held in said court on the 3rd day of February, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock a. m. or as soon thereafter as the business of the court will permit.

All persons desiring may file objections in said court before said day, and may appear on the hearing and make their defense.

W. A. Whiting, C. W. Pettis, W. M. Reay, B. H. Kress

Board of Local Improvements of the Village of Deerfield. Dated, Deerfield, Lake County, Illinois, January 15, 1915.

Estimates Furnished on Lamps and Brackets House, Power and Motor Wiring

Robert Greenslade Highland Park, Ill. 134 2nd Street Tel. 805-L

Let Me Save You Tax Season Worries

If there is any matter affecting your Lake County property upon which, now that the tax season is close upon you, you wish authentic and prompt information, let me help you out, be it a matter ever so small or ever so weighty.

Come to Me for Information Regarding Taxes or Special Assessments

You can save yourself many annoyances and worries each year if you will let me look after your Lake County taxes for you. Why not let me begin this season—now? Let me have a description of your property, then I can say what my charges will be.

Tax Abstracts Insurance Renting and Real Estate Surety Bonds Rent Collections

James Hepburn Sheridan Building Phone 63

Advertise in The Highland Park Press

She Smiled Maliciously. "Forgery!"

of him, and he laughed at her fears. So they both were soon their real selves and sat down to a hearty breakfast in Mrs. Darnell's rooms.

This ended, Jean took out the papers and spent an hour going over them carefully. Wilkerson smoked nervously, but did not interrupt her. When she laid the documents down he saw a queer glitter in her pawn eyes.

"So it has come to the old game, eh?" she said in a low voice. "I thought you had had enough of that."

"Enough of what?" he demanded quickly.

She smiled maliciously. She formed the word slowly and precisely: "Forgery!"

His dark face grew pallid, and his eyes flashed ominously. "I did it for you that time—and no thanks! But this is all right. Those deeds are genuine."

"They merely assure the property to Thomas Gallion and his heirs and assigns. When you found Tom Gallion at last and had him ready to do anything you wanted just as the price of your silence I suppose it didn't occur to you to have him dead over the 'Master Key' mine to you, did it?"

"He wouldn't have done it!" he burst out furiously. "He shot me once. He would have shot me again to save the mine for the girl."

"Then what good are these papers?" "Gradually he perceived the drift of her speech. He looked at her for a moment dumbly, as if for instruction. But she was ruthless. He must propose the crime himself. She handed him the papers.

He stared at them and then glanced across at Jean. She was waiting. He cursed her under his breath. She had always been waiting—waiting for him to break the law, to suffer that she might have comforts and jewels and keep unimpaird that beauty that had been his downfall. But the spell worked, as it had worked before.

"I'll have to go out and buy some blank deeds," he said laboriously. "I may have to look up some other points, too, about these papers."

As he left the room Jean Darnell looked after him, lazy triumph in her eyes.

"Estelle," she said languidly, "you may dress my hair. I shall go to a matinee this afternoon. If Mr. Wilkerson comes, tell him I am engaged till tonight."

Life at Beverly Hills was a welcome change to Ruth after the strenuous days that had passed since she left the "Master Key" mine.

There were not many at the hotel and the most prominent figure among the guests was a tall, carefully dressed Englishman, so typically the tourist that the old cook insisted on identifying him on the register.

"I ain't seen many of the new kinds of people," he explained. "I've been out in the mine so many years that the styles in real gents has kind of escaped me. I ain't no know just what kind of birds I'm roosting with."

"Who is he?" laughed Ruth, as they gazed out at the rising hills.

"He's marked down as Sir Donald Faversham, and he's from the British Isles," Tom Kane rejoined. "He is here for his health, they say. I suppose that's why he has to wear them white ankle warmers on his legs."