Highland Park, Ill.

FOR over two years we have considered the urgent need of Pure Ice for the people of the North Shore. During this period we have visited many ice making plants, to ascertain the most practical and latest improvements in this branch, and for a time we had almost abandoned the idea of going ahead, fearing the enormous cost of an up-to-date plant. Last fall, however, we concluded to go ahead, with the determination that only PURE ICE should be made, and trusting to its merit to warrant your patronage.

MUTTON, MONEY AND DRESS.

Eccentric Henry Cavendish and Some of His Queer Ways.

Whenever Henry Cavendish, the famous English chemist and physicist, entertained his guests he would always give them the same fare—a leg of mutton. A story goes that one day when four friends were coming it was asked him what should be ordered for dinner. He answered, "A leg of mutton." "Sir," was the reply, "that will not be enough for five." Well, then, get two," said the host.

When this eccentric gentleman died he was the largest holder of bank stock in England. He owned £1,157,000 in different public funds, besides freehold property of £8,000 a year and a balance of £50,000 on account. This large income was allowed to accumulate without attention. On one occasion, when the bankers had in hand a balance of £80,000, they thought it well to acquaint Mr. Cavendish with the fact.

"If it is any trouble to you I will take it out of your hands. Do not come here to plague me."

"Not the least trouble to us, sir, but we thought you might like some of it to be invested."

"Well, what do you want to do?"

"Perhaps you would like half of it invested?"

"Do so, do so, and do not come here to bother me or I'll remove it," was the childish finale of the interview.

Cavendish was seventy-eight years of age when he died, in 1832, and he had never changed the fashion of his dress for sixty years.—London Graphic.

Swallowed and Climbed.

A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of the fowl and salad this woman noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess' eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe. The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and swallowed it calmly. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

"Did you think," said Mrs. Newly-rich to her daughter afterward, "that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

FIRING A TORPEDO.

How a Submarine Flings Forth the Deadly Projectile.

When a submarine sights a hostile vessel a group of sailors quickly cluster round the torpedo tube. This is loaded with its instrument of destruction, and behind it a powder charge is inserted in a receptacle and the trigger controlling the firing mechanism cocked ready. A gunner proceeds to estimate the speed of the target, and its course through glasses. He then adjusts a device known as the "director," which by means of dials tells him when the tube is pointing in the right direction to launch the torpedo true to its mark. At a distance of about 3,000 yards the gunner presses a button, the powder charge explodes and a pressure of fifty pounds per square inch is put upon the rear end of the torpedo.

The well greased projectile is forced through the open end of the tube at a rate of thirty-five feet per second, and as it takes the water in a long flat dive the twin propellers in the rear set to work. They are driven by an air pressure of 2,250 pounds, which sets the driving machinery in motion as the torpedo leaps from its tube.

A gyroscope steering gear prevents the torpedo from deviating from a straight path, and unless it is enclosely fired or its target quickly maneuvers out of the way the £200 projectile seldom misses its mark.

STUCK IN THE MUD.

That Was the Normal Condition in Chicago Village in 1833.

An elaborate series of descriptions of middle western road conditions is contained in Charles Cleaver's "History of Chicago From 1832 to 1892. Illustrating the Difficulties of the Route From New York to Chicago." In the village of Chicago in 1833, Cleaver tells us:

"Parties informed us that in the spring we would find it almost impossible to get around for the mud, a truth forcibly illustrated when a few months later I got into a wagon to go about one and a half miles northwest. It was with the greatest difficulty that two good horses could pull the empty wagon through the two feet of mud and water across the prairie. . . . A year or two later I saw many teams stuck fast in the streets of the village."

"I remember once a stagecoach got mired in Clark street, opposite the Sherman House, where it remained several days, with a board driven into the mud bearing this inscription: 'No bottom here.' I once saw a lady stuck in the mud in the middle of Randolph street. She was evidently in need of help, as every time she moved she sank deeper and deeper. An old gentleman from the country offered to help her, which had such an effect upon her modesty that with one desperate effort she drew her feet out along her shoes."
