The Pianist's Speed.

Astonishing statistics have been gathered with reference to the amount of work accomplished by the brain and nerves in piano playing.

A pianist in view of the present state of pianoforte playing has to cultivate the eye to see about 1,500 signs in one minute, the fingers to make about 2,000 movements and the brain to receive and understand separately the 1,500 signs while it issues 2,000 orders. In playing Weber's "Moto Perpetuo" a pianist has to read 4,541 notes in a little under four minutes. This is about nineteen per second, but the eye can receive only about ten consecutive impressions per second, so that it is evident that in very rapid music a player does not see each note singly, but rather sees them in groups, probably a bar or more at one vision. In Chopin's "Etude" in E minor, in the second set, the speed of reading is still greater, since it is necessary to read 3,850 signs in two minutes and a half, which is equivalent to about twenty-six notes per second.—Independent.

Two Doctors.

The famous Dr. John Abernethy, securing a rich and famous quack, said: "Sir, you are no surgeon. You swindle the public. You deceive your patients. You are totally ignorant and utterly unscrupulous, and yet you live in a palace, ride in a chariot and actually smell of wealth." I, John Abernethy, surgeon of London, an operator, a student, an author, I, who strive to be an honest and conscientious man, must live in a humble abode, must walk my rounds and only by the hardest work do I make a bare living. Why are these things?"

The quack said: "Mr. Abernethy, yonder is London bridge. How many people, think you, cross it in a day?"

The surgeon answered: "I do not know; perhaps a hundred thousand."

The quack responded: "And how many of them are fools? You, Mr. Abernethy, attend the wise men; I attend the fools."

A Premier Who Won't Write.

Count Okuma, though he is the author of books and pamphlets and innumerable magazine and newspaper articles, dictates all his work to a secretary and so far as is known has never even written his own signature. The truth of the matter is that he forms the beautiful Chinese characters like a schoolboy, and, since the autographs of the great are highly prized in Japan, many expedients have been successfully tried to get a scrap of his writing. A friend once made an attempt which came near being successful. He pretended to have forgotten how to form a certain Chinese character and asked how it should be written. Count Okuma took up the brush and paper, which had been conveniently placed at his elbow, but the plot failed at the last moment, for he put down the writing material with a smile, and traced the character with his finger on the ashes of the hearth.—Carl Crow in World's Work.

Presence of Mind.

Young Arthur, the pride of the family, had been attending school all of six weeks, and his devoted parent thought it was high time he should find out how things were running. So he asked one afternoon:

"And what did my little son learn about this morning?"

"Oh, a mouse, Miss Wilcox told us all about mice."

"That's the boy. Now, how do you spell mouse?"

"It was when that Arthur gave promise of being an artful dodger. He paused meditatively for a moment, then said:

"Father, I guess I was wrong. It wasn't a mouse teacher was telling us about; it was a rat."—Harper's Magazine.

Couldn't Blame Them.

Papa had a grouch, and an atmosphere of deep gloom settled over the family dinner table. Even little Bobby felt that something was wrong, but he had to talk or burst, and he preferred to talk.

"Daddy," he asked, "why did they throw the tea overboard in Boston harbor?"

Daddy twirled the spoon in his cup while he thought up this mean thing to say: "If it was anything like this stuff they certainly had a mighty good excuse for throwing it overboard."

Having got this remark off his chest, the old man felt so good that he actually smiled, and before he knew it his grouch was gone.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Keen Observer.

"Pa," said George, "is it true that George Washington never told a lie?"

"I guess so, my son. Why?"

"I was just thinkin'," said George, who was a keen observer, "that if that was true Martha must have always gone along whenever he went out any where."—Exchange.

Wedding Vows.

Patience—So he never took any marriage vows?

Patrice—Oh, yes, he did!

"But I thought he was still a bachelor."

"He is, but he vowed he'd never get married."—Yonkers Statesman.

Saunterers.

A "saunterer" in the old days was one who had made a pilgrimage to the Sainte Terre, the Holy Land. The connection between the word and place is clear.

Knowledge, in truth, is the great sun in the firmament. Life and power are scattered with its beams.—Webster.

MOTHER GOOSE FANTASIA

thirst; she could not wait until the conclusion of the delicate spring song which was being played, so the big sister, with the resignation of a little mother, led her away to the bubbling fountain. The piece was not finished when the big sister, herself no more than ten years, came running excitedly back to the grandmother. But that gentle old lady, roused now to Spartan sternness, held up a warning finger saying sharply, "sit down—don't say a word—listen to the music." With eyes big with anxiety, the little mother obeyed reluctantly. Finally as the music ceased and hand-clapping began, the writer heard the big sister say: "O grandma, tootsie wouldn't mind; she would run around that lily pond, and she tumbled in. She thought she was drowned and yelled something awful."

Exeunt grandmother and brood so precipitately that crackerjack and caps were spilled "regardless" all around where they had sat. Only the fear of starting a panic kept the remaining audience in their seats. CONTRIBUTED.
