THE GETTING OF AN EDUCATION

There are thousands of people who value an education and who desire to obtain one and who moreover would speedily have one if only they could. ABSORB is by a mere expression of the will, or if they could have it INJECTED into them as a doctor might inject morphine. Indeed they would be willing to PAY FOR IT LIBERALLY if that alone were sufficient, but the idea of having to put forth an effort to get it seems not to appeal to them so strongly. This is why it may be said that THE IGNORANT ARE ALWAYS WITH US. They always with so much show of truth that they always will be. BUT THE PROPOSITION IS BECOMING LESS AND LESS EVERY DAY. FORCE OF CIRCUMSTANCES IS MAKING IT SO. It is harder to-day for the uneducated to succeed than it was yesterday, and it will be harder to-morrow than it is to-day. If that is true—and it is beyond the shadow of a doubt—should we not promptly take time by the forelock and prepare ourselves for the inevitable.

TO-DAY AFFORDS YOU THE OPPORTUNITY There was a time when an education was available to the few only—to those whose circumstances made it possible for them to attend a college or university, but TO-DAY—thanks to the unique system of Correspondence Instruction conducted by the

CHARMING GIFTS FOR YOUNG GIRLS

Things That Are Pretty For Her Christmas Stocking.

THE dainty brassiere shown is made of finest linen, hand embroidered with an eyelet pattern. The edges are finished with an exquisite linen tuck lace.

Another gift the college girl always retires in is quantities of handkerchiefs. The very newest and at the same time the only really smart and elegant handkerchief is made of a very fine linen in white or any delicate color. It is hemmed by hand, the hem not more than an eighth of an inch wide, in the corner of which is embroidered the monogram or crest in color or white, preferably white.

If you want to be up to the minute make some of them of the cloth.

One style of handkerchief is of solid pale pink color and is found with a narrow white hem. Blue, lavender and green colors are used in the same way. A number of the handkerchiefs have a very wide border of white around a solid portion of color.

Golfing, tennis, riding, dancing, walking, photography, butterfly chasing, wild flower collecting, crocheting, embroidery, swimming, dogs, chafing dish suppers, music—any possible hobby may have its symbol embroidered in colors in the corner of the newest handkerchief. Just think how the girl who is "simply wild about autoing" will appreciate a half dozen fine linen handkerchiefs showing a little red machine ready to run about the hem-stitched edge, but securely embroidered in place!

The making of these very attractive little accessories might very well prove a hobby in itself, as they offer such possibilities for most original gifts and favors. A yard of handkerchief linen one yard wide will make nine twelve-inch squares, which may be finished in various ways. If you are brave seal the edge in small scallops and colored cotton. If time is a consideration apply a very narrow separate hem of a colored linen and either stitch it by hand or by machine. Another pretty and decorative way of finishing the handmade handkerchief is to roll the edge and overcast it with a colored cotton; going back over this overcast edge and reversing the process so that the second stitching: cross the first ones. There is also a plain buttonhole edge that may be done in colors or a buttonhole that is being much used for centerpieces, where, instead of each centerpiece following the other in even procession, about four or five buttonhole stitches radiate from one point to the edge, forming something very like a shell crochet.

If You Make a Tobacco Pouch. If you are contemplating embroidering a tobacco pouch for a man of your acquaintance please keep in mind his color preferences.

Don't make it too big—he doesn't want to carry his entire supply of the "weed" in it nor yet too small. Remember the size of his pockets and think how large the bag will be when filled.

Line it with oil silk to keep the tobacco in good condition and get good off silk while you are about it.

A Crestone Twins Box. A necessary fitting in every household is a twins box. An ordinary square box, such as some jewelry comes in—as a small clock box or wooden salt box, for example—is covered with some pretty stuff. A hole is punched on the top; a ball of twine is put into the box; the end being drawn through the hole. A cheap pair of scissors may be fastened to the box, so that the string and the scissors for cutting it are always in a convenient place.
