The Rexall Store

ONE CENT SALE!

at Schumacher's Drug Store
March 16--17--18. Remember the Date

How Can He Do It? The One-Cent Sale Puzzles Many People? "How can Fred W. Schumacher sell two articles of a kind for only one cent more than the price of one?" The answer is—he cannot! The United Drug Company, the big Rexall organization, does it for him; they have originated this mammoth One-Cent Sale, to be given at each Rexall Store once or twice a year, as a part of their advertising campaign, devoting a certain sum of money to this purpose, just as they do to their magazine and newspaper campaigns—realizing that the more homes into which they can get a full-size, practical package of really meritorious goods the more enthusiastic friends and boosters they will make for their line.

The Rexall druggist reports his sales, and is paid from the advertising fund a small profit, sufficient to compensate him for the time and money spent in making the Sale successful. If everybody realized the real big bargain they are offered in this One-Cent Sale the allotment of goods would not last one day let alone three days of the sale.

A Little History

ABOUT twenty-five years ago, the writer while traveling in the northern part of Canada, observed that the Indian inhabitants were buying all their supplies from one large corporation, which seemed to control them, although there were several smaller traders anxious to serve them, and willing to give them much greater value in merchandise for their furs than the larger Company was doing.

Upon investigation it was found that the reason for their doing this was that practically all of the Indians were in debt to the large Company in a great many instances owing more than they could possibly pay for with the following winter's catch of furs, therefore being compelled to accept a smaller amount of merchandise for their furs, than they would have received from the smaller traders, had they not been in debt to the larger Company.

Are we going back to the Indians way of doing business?

Deerfield P. T. A.

"Quarantined. Who Pays?" the amusing play which was given in the Deerfield school Friday and Saturday evenings, was a clever satire on some of the recent happenings in the village, as well as exploiting some of the views of the bachelor authors, Messrs. S. D. Nelson and Carl Rommel.

The actors showed unusual ability in comedy, and kept the audience convulsed with merriment from start to finish; the Misses Clara Pyle and Ruth Kress exhibited their usual versatility as charming maidens who are the objects of affection. Carl Rommel made a dignified broker, little accustomed to love making, and Carl Seastrand a sagacious inventor, Ewald Winter was a dudsish inspector, a graduate of a correspondence school. Willard Goldring was the mischievous small brother. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pettis portrayed farmers, at home and on a visit to the city, and their costumes and actions were mirth provoking. Mrs. Pettis was a typical "Sis Hopkins." It must have taken courage to transform oneself into such an unlovely woman. Robert Pettis' characterization was the hit of the evening. Dancing followed the play. Eighty-eight dollars was realized from the entertainment which was given for the benefit of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The Parent-Teacher Association met Thursday afternoon, February 24th, in the school auditorium. After the usual routine of business, the treasurer made a report. About seventy-three dollars was realized on the carnival and masquerade. Ninety-five dollars was taken in at the door and booths. Music, costumes and incidentals amounted to about twenty-two dollars. Money was voted to purchase song books for the school. Thirty-five dollars was voted to be expended for reference books, inexpensive primary reading books, pictures for picture study and supplies. Mrs. Reichelt, Sr., Miss Woodman, and Mrs. Jordan were appointed to confer with the teachers and purchase these supplies.

Two home economic articles were read and there followed a discussion of the University of Illinois Household Science Extension Work, and their demonstration car. All present indicated their interest and pledged their support to an effort to get this extension work to come to Deerfield. The third week in March has been offered by the University for lectures and demonstrations here.
