What the Simplex will Iron

The Simplex will iron 80 per cent of the family ironing—anything plain or flat— all the heavy pieces that take so much time and strength. It will take care of Table Cloths, Napkins, Center Pieces, Doilies, Dresser Scarfs, Curtains, Sheets, Bed Spreads, Pillow Slips, Blankets, Towels, Night Dresses, Pajamas, Hosiery, Children's Rompers, etc. Some articles, such as Petticoats, can often be partly ironed with the Simplex and the ruffles done by hand. This means great saving.

Where it Saves

An ironing that takes you half a day or so by hand, the "Simplex" does easily in one hour.

The "Simplex" costs only two cents an hour to heat by gas. It requires much less heat per hour than ordinary irons and always maintains a uniform, evenly distributed heat which does not make the room uncomfortably warm.

SPEECH OF CONGRESSMAN FOSS

long as it is in any way credited it can not fail to do the greatest harm and expose the country to the most serious risks. We all of us must realize that such a condition of affairs necessarily weakens the voice of the President and cripples and paralyzes his hand. There ought to be no question as to the duty of the American Congress in a time like this.

The Constitution further provides that the laws shall be faithfully executed, and that "this Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land." In pursuance of his constitutional duty the President is enforcing the supreme law of the land and has demanded, in his negotiations with belligerent countries that the rights of American citizens and American commerce on the high seas shall be upheld in accordance with the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the accepted principles of international law, and the recognized usages of nations. The President's note of May 13, 1915, stated that—

"American citizens act within their indisputable rights in taking their ships and traveling wherever their business calls them—

And so forth.

We may doubt the wisdom of their traveling on armed merchantmen, and we individually may warn our friends against it, but for our Government, in its official capacity, to give a warning is another and more serious question, and would be considered a surrender and a yielding up of those rights which have been established by our courts and long since recognized by all the nations.

The submarine is a new type of war vessel. We have them in our Navy. They are in all navies; but for one, my mind revolts at the suggestion that the settled principles of international law should be modified to suit the conditions and conveniences of every new demon of warfare, either in the sea below or in the sky above, in order that it may pursue more effectually its murderous way. Such a position, in my judgment, means a backward step in the development of international law. It means going back to the Dark Ages and to barbarism. If the course of international law is to be changed, I want to see it take the pathway of civilization, humanity, and the progress of the world to the higher headlands of righteousness and justice.

The American people are not for war. They are for peace with all nations, but not for peace at any price. They believe in the freedom of the seas and the right of American citizens to travel on the high seas, which they are justly entitled to, and to these they will hold fast; and if we do not stand for our rights for which our fathers so dearly fought we are unworthy of them. I can not yield to the unpatriotic suggestion that comes from some quarters that we ought to refrain from insisting upon our position, because forsooth of its effect upon one side or the other of the belligerents. Our duty is to stand for what we believe to be right under the accepted principles of international law, and to use a homely expression, "let the chips fall where they will." We have taken our position upon the high plane of neutrality, and we insist upon our rights as neutrals and nothing more.

Our duty is clear. At the water's edge all politics cease. This is no question of party politics. It rises higher than that. It is a question of American statesmanship, and let us meet it like men "who know their rights and knowing dare maintain."

When the war clouds which are today enveloping all Europe shall have passed away, when the last shot shall have been fired, when the trenches shall have given up their dead, and when the mighty armies shall have gone back to the useful pursuits of life, under I trust an everlasting peace, then the nations which are now at war, violating the principles of international law which they once held dear, will gaze in grateful appreciation across the sea to that spirit of America, white robed and holding aloft the law of nations as she tells them, "I have held it sacred as between you all. I have held it for you to this brighter day, and I have held it for all mankind and for the coming of international peace, which must rest on international justice."

I appeal to you by all the ties that bind us to a common country that our voice may ring out clear and strong on this day so that it can be heard around the world, and would that its refrain might be caught up by the American people everywhere, on the hillsides of the North, on the prairies of the West, and on the savannahs of the South, that as American citizens we stand united one and all for our country.

Another Idol Shattered
 I said to one of my golfing friends Who shoots in seventy-three, Why don't you look at the hole when you putt?
 As advised by B. L. T.
 And he turned on me a pitying glance As he put his drink away, And said, "Don't tell me of B. L. T. For I have seen him play."
 "If he should play with a baseball bat It couldn't hurt his swing, And when it comes to the putting green, Oh! he is the awful thing."
 —Flint Lock.

The Lay of the Amateur Gopher
 I go upon the links to play, To swing and sweat the ball, And if it goes to right or left I do not care at all.
 For I go out for exercise Of shoulder, wrist and spine; So why should I cut out the fun By driving down the line?
 With slice and pull, good stance and bad, When I address the ball— The exercise for which I go, I'm sure to get it all.
 And when I swing and fan the air, Or roll into the pit, Why then I get just twice the fun, And do not sweat a bit.
 So tree and shrub and water-hole, And sand-pit and the bunker— I visit all these dear old friends Before I use my putter.
 And driver, midiron, mashie, nib, And nerves from scalp to sole— I exercise each one of these Before I make the hole.
 For only seven years have I Been after Colonel Bogey; In that short time I don't expect To make you green with envy.
 —J. M. Watson

It is generally conceded that there was plenty to eat at the Domestic Science Show.
 Referring to the self-appointed critics of the hospital, we are reminded of a sentence penned by the late Elbert Hubbard: "Let them talk; they will talk anyway." And about most anything, at any time, anyhow.
 Our ticket: Patrick Henry Ford for president of the jitneys. Motto: Give us fliverty or give us death.
 We suggest a large banquet at Washington, D. C. Invite most of those congressmen, free of charge. Jean Cronos could mix the soup, with our permission and accord.
 We suggest a board to censor the "Movie Censors." Please give us some constructive movie dramas. Can the "melodrammers" and the soul surgery stuff. Give us new mown hay; we're sick of tabacco.
 Keep your eyes on that "Conservative Ticket."

HEAR WITHOUT EARS
 Police and Detectives Are Using Lip Reading in Place of the Dictagraph.
 Thousands of deaf people are today throwing away all hearing devices and enjoying all conversation. This method is easily and quickly acquired through our system. Absolutely the only thing of its kind in the country. Our proposition is entirely original. We guarantee results, it will amaze you. Cost is trifling. See what New International Encyclopedia says on Lip Reading. Hundreds of people with normal hearing are taking up Lip Reading for the many additional benefits gained. You can understand what the actors are saying in the moving pictures. You can understand what people are saying just as far away as you can see them. The eye understands beyond the range of hearing. Send no money, but mention this paper and state whether or not you are deaf. All particulars will be sent you absolutely free and with no expense to you. Address, School of Lip Language, Kansas City, Missouri. adv
