LACK OF INTEREST AT PRIMARIES

Women Did Not Vote Excepting in the City of Chicago

The presidential primaries Tuesday were void of interest excepting that they brought out a fight for county central committeemen.

It developed during the day that two tickets were in the field for county central committee. Two factions had gotten together a candidate in almost every precinct and the fight was to get control of the county central committee.

Women did not vote in the primaries in Lake county.

They did not vote in Cook county in the county vote of the county, but a singular situation developed when it became known that women were being permitted to vote in the primary at the polling stations inside the city of Chicago. Just what effect this will have on the whole situation in the state will be interesting to determine later. It seems as if the women can vote in one place as well as in another; and if they cannot vote in one they cannot in another.

Mr. Head of the House, if you, or a man in your employ had such a job, you'd regard it as a scandalous waste of time and energy, if you knew that a machine would take it over. There is one

The Electric Washing Machine

A simple machine. A child can run it. For such is its mechanical perfection that all you have to do is to run in some water and soap, start the motor and then, not wrench and strain and scrub, but just look on. The machine does the rest.

An expenditure of a few cents will pay for the electricity necessary to operate the machine while doing a week's wash—about five cents for a family of six. Contrast that with the wages of a washwoman or with the physical cost of over-exertion which must be paid for ultimately
