Don't "Jiggle" the Hook

THE signalling device in front of the telephone operator is a small electric lamp. It is the same as any other electric lamp—a trifle sluggish in lighting up. You can move the button on an electric light fixture so fast that the lamp will not light. Try it. This is what happens when you "jiggle" the hook of the telephone, and consequently the operator does not get your signal.

To get the operator's attention, move the receiver hook up and down slowly. Observance of this rule helps to make the service more prompt.
