but I do mean that the net result is progress—that the upward and onward sweep is ever lengthening. I am free to say that I cannot imagine any happier fortune in life than that of taking the lead, for ever so short a time over ever so brief a course, in this onward rush of man. In the light of the past the ultimate earthly destiny of the human race is beyond the power of present conception. How inexpressibly sweet, then, ought the assurance to be that we have cleared even one short step of the way to the goal.

Tonight, my friends, I almost dare to hope that we are inaugurating a movement which will be world-wide in its influence and its benefits. Some pessimist has said that there is nothing new under the sun. How such a thought can live in the midst of the revelations of evolution I shall not stop to inquire. I will but call your attention to the fact that this earth is only sixty million years old, and that the possibilities of new combinations are not yet nearly exhausted. Cooperation has, of course for ages been practiced by man. Even municipal cooperation, in spite of the long historical record of interurban hatred and warfare and jealousies and rivalries, is not unknown. But I undertake to say that never before, in all the time of municipal activities, has such a thorough, detailed, scientific scheme of mutual work and helpfulness been developed as that which we have here. Ostensibly it was devised for the benefit of the eleven cities and villages named in the formal statement of our Plan, but I make bold to say that, in reality, we build on the germ of an idea, which developed, fostered and further worked out, will be adopted, in greater or less degree, throughout the land, and in the fruits of which other peoples and future generations will rejoice.

I am not permitted to enlarge upon this theme on this occasion. The time will prove all too short for the carrying out of our program of the evening. I feel, though, that I must add by way of caution a few words to what I have said.

The old saying, there can be no crown without dust, is the truest thing that was ever writ. We shall not succeed, unless we work. Let each one do his part faithfully, therefore, that all may profit.

Again, we must be careful not to burden ourselves with too many details. What friction is to machinery system may become to human endeavor. The chief bane of all government, next to corruption, is bureaucracy. May I tell an anecdote to illustrate my point?

A salesman of a firm manufacturing office and store fixtures had sold a merchant a complicated filing system. One day, a month or two after the sale, he called on the merchant to see how he was getting along.

"How is the new filing system?" he asked the merchant. "Is it a success?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied the latter. "It's great!"

"Good," said the salesman. "I'm delighted to hear you say that. And how is business?"

"Oh," answered the merchant, "we've stopped business to attend to the filing system."

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied the latter. "It's great!"

"Oh," answered the merchant, "we've stopped business to attend to the filing system."

A Lower Gas Rate

One of the most important questions to be considered by this association is that of the regulation of public utilities. It is especially vital for us to treat these problems in common, for we represent a string of communities which are already supplied with gas, electric light, telephone and telegraph, steam and electric transportation from common sources, while water and drainage facilities are tending more and more toward unification. Separate handling of these problems involves waste, duplication of effort and inefficiency which reacts in higher costs to the companies and therefore to the public, and in lack of control over service and prices.

I am happy to say that this association has already justified its existence by initiating negotiations with the North Shore Gas Company which have secured lower rates for gas to begin on January 1st next. Some three months ago your president (we) called the city representatives and the gas company officials into conference with a view to securing, if possible, an amicable readjustment of rates which would be satisfactory to the consumers and at the same time avoid the years of litigation and delay as well as expense to the cities which recourse to the courts would involve.

The company promptly responded with a proposed new schedule of rates which after the negotiations and counter-offers natural to such bargains, has finally been arranged on a basis satisfactory to your city governments and to their attorneys who have represented them at the hearings with great ability and faithfulness in attendance. At the last hearing, which was conducted under the auspices of the State Public Utilities Commissioners, the cities united on the rates they would agree to. The Company, after due consideration, has decided to accept this schedule as I have today been informed by inquiring of the officials.

The new rates are $1.00 for the first 1000 feet of gas consumed, the same as before, then 90c a thousand for the next 10,000 feet, 80c for the next 20,000 feet and still lower for the big industrial consumers. The present rate for ordinary household consumption is, as you know, $1.00 a thousand. This gives us a measured rate comparing favorably, I believe, with that of any other Illinois community of similar size, and it goes into effect almost immediately. I think a happy precedent for joint treatment of other equally important problems in the future. I congratulate the consumer and the company on this business-like method of solving their differences with dispatch and mutual good will.

As toastmaster, Mayor Hastings then introduced Mayor William Mather Lewis of Lake Forest, who spoke on "Preparedness." Mr. Lewis felt it was particularly appropriate that a representative of Lake Forest should speak on "Preparedness," Lake Forest being so closely tucked in by the Naval Station on the north, the Army Post on the south, Lake Michigan on the east, and Armour on the west. Want of space prevents us from giving more than a resume of this very interesting speech. Mr. Lewis considered the occasion of rare importance and epoch-making, because it marks the inauguration of a policy of cooperation among communities closely related, which up to the present time, have tried to work out their own municipal problems in an individual way. The hope of this nation lies in solidarity, in mutual understanding and helpfulness. If we are to present to the world the strength which is necessary for future greatness we must cease to let the immediate interests of the east or middle west or the south or the far west predominate—ask the question of ourselves, "What is our duty as citizens of the United States?" Back of every national problem lies the problem of the individual and small community. Mr. Lewis advocated Universal Military Training more from the standpoint of model strength and of industrial efficiency than of Military Preparedness. He said that our country will never come into its own until respect for the discipline of the home, for industry and economy, for established law, and for the flag, now so pitifully lacking. It is prophesied that in 1950 the population from Kenilworth to Waukegan will be one hundred and twenty five thousand people. We must prepare accordingly, our problems of sewage disposal, lighting, railroad elevation or depression. Up to the present, America has been loathe to consider anything but the immediate present. Before we can become enthusiastic however, on Conservation, we must see all the beauty spots; before we can plan intelligently for the future we must personally investigate its deficiencies—make this North Shore a fit place to bring up our children, see that the blind pig whether housed in hovel or exclusive club is promptly and efficiently put out of business. We must give a little of the time we devote to personal business to that vastly more important business of constructive citizenship. The North Shore is greatly indebted, said Mr. Lewis, to the gracious gentleman presiding, but in nothing more than that, it was he who first put in motion the machinery that has erected this Association of North Shore Municipalities, from this combination of effort already we understand there is to be a reduction in price of gas after January first. The next speaker Mr. Rummier, president of the Village of Winnetka, who described himself as the engineering end of a firm of lawyers spoke most carefully of the respective merits of railroad elevation and depression. Personally he advocated depression for this particular section of the country though to some it might seem more costly, he pointed out the fact that with municipal aid it need not be. It was one of the instances where working together might be of special help to all. After fairly digesting these facts and figures the audience was introduced to Mr. W. A. Alexander of Highland Park though the toastmaster presented him as a citizen of any place that had a golf course. The speaker while most entertaining in his talk brought to the notice of his hearers the change in the physique of American men and women since golf had become such a general pastime not only is the change noticeable physically but men and women are not only more intelligent but broad minded and are better citizens. Mr. Alexander extolled the many good movements already inaugurated by our worthy mayor, and his happy knack of appointing Commissions and Committees so that every man, woman and child in Highland Park felt that they had a part in the city government. Not slow to take up the thread of Mr. Alexander's speech, the mayor while thanking him informed him that he would get to work on a municipal golf club for Highland Park where those who were unable to join expensive clubs could get all the benefits of the game he would immediately appoint a Municipal Golf Commission (laughter). One of the pleasant features of the evening was a short speech by Mrs. Alice Wood, one of the trustees of the Village of Winnetka, a position we believe quite unique for a woman in this state. In a very interesting way Mrs. Wood demonstrated how enjoyable her work was and strongly urged other women, when called upon, to accept positions where they might be of service in the government in their own home towns. In this city of wonderful natural beauty it was only right that we should have a word from one who has worked so effectively and arduously to preserve our native trees and shrubs and to make a City Beautiful. It is one better fitted that Mr. Everett Millard to tell us what has been accomplished and how much can be done to preserve and enlarge the beauty spots in our midst.

Having representatives of both the Army and Navy on the platform it was only right that we should have a word from at least one branch of the service; Commander Moffet of the Great Lakes Training Station in a very dignified manner spoke of the advantages of the Naval Station and regretted that it was not better known, enumerated some of the ways in which the station could help the Municipality, having all scientific methods for filtering and treating water, etc., reminded the audience that the Great Lakes Station is a possession of the whole country and he wished it could be more visited, more interest taken in it which would encourage enlistment and be ended by giving us a few reasons for the need of a greater Naval Station.

Mr. Rogers of Lake Forest made a few words on the legal end of the association and hoped for a "getting together" on the question of special assessment.

With the singing of a verse of the Star Spangled Banner the entertainment came to an end, and it was generally felt that great praise was due to all concerned in making this gathering such a success.

The Ladies Aid Society will hold its annual bazaar on Thursday afternoon, December fourteenth from three thirty p. m. to ten p. m. in the Singer Sewing machine store, adjoining room at 19 S. St. John Ave.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Laura Mulke on S. Second St.

After the Sunday School lesson on Sunday morning a very pleasant surprise was given the Sunday School when Mrs. Sewel Trux, in original costume gave a delightful talk on the Holy Land. Mrs. Trux who has taken this trip seven years ago made her talk so interesting with the different souvenirs which she exhibited that it made the trip which the Sunday School is taking from New York to Palestine seem like the real thing. The Sunday School scholars were all smiles as the attendance last Sunday was the largest of the coming day up to date.

The message from Palestine given by one just from the Holy Land was a surprise to all. The time was so entirely too limited to inspect the many relics from the historic cities. The following is a message from the Aquitania. We have been making such a record breaking trip, that our passengers are not aware that they are nearing the harbor of Joppa. We send fifth message at ten p. m. Dec. 10. Yours Captain of the Blue.

Highland Park Woman's Club
