As winter approaches and the nights grow longer, burglars and foot-pads grow bolder, as perhaps you or some of your neighbors have already realized. Judging by the number of crimes of this nature reported in the newspapers.

There Are More Burglars

and foot-pads operating in and around your neighborhood now than ever before. The fact that this form of crime continues to flourish year after year would indicate that it cannot be prevented. Fortunately for the public

SLOW TRAVEL IN MANCHURIA

Better Progress is Made in Winter Than in Summer by Antiquated Methods.

Although it is much easier to reach Manchuria now than it was ten or fifteen years ago, the man who would travel in the interior of this primitive part of China, as soon as he leaves the few railroads, must rely upon means that were standard a century ago.

If it is winter he will rattle over the frozen mud in a cart drawn by three horses. At night he will stop at an inn where he must supply his own bed and a large part of his own food, unless he is willing to be satisfied with a little boiled corn. The walls of his room will be of paper and eyes will peer at him through holes hastily punched for the purpose. In the morning his driver will awaken him before daylight and start him on another long day of jolts and freezing.

In the summer travel is easier and pleasanter, but also much slower. A boat may be taken upon one of the rivers. It will crawl along between pleasantly shaded banks and green fields, every little while coming to rest upon a sandbar, so that progress is unbelievably slow, even going down stream. Against the current the boat is laboriously poled and dragged with heavy ropes.

By these means the traveler may penetrate into a region where change is unknown and the principles of Confucius still rule. He will meet natives who have never seen a watch or a railroad train, although they nominally belong to one of the oldest civilizations; he will see the squalor and dirt and disease that go with ignorance.

The fact will be forcibly brought home to him that modern progress travels over good roads.

SUBSCRIBE NOW—FOR A LIBERTY BOND

If any sentimentalist should answer that he does not care to lend his money and "send our boys to death abroad" we may truthfully tell him that every dollar he now gives will mean a drop of American blood saved.

Pacifists and pro-Germans cannot stop our American soldiers from going abroad. Our boys will go—and more will go, and still more—until the decisive day. The harder we strike, the sooner that exodus will end.

Uncle Sam says: "I want to see a Liberty Bond in every American home."

"Liberty Bonds" is just a name for United States Government bonds issued during our fight for Liberty.

From the view point of pure business we can conscientiously recommend the United States Government 4 per cent Liberty Bonds as the world's greatest and best investment.

Shall America be weak or shall America be strong?

It seems out of place, in a way, to bring up the Liberty Loan in connection with questions of self-sacrifice. For you do not sacrifice, you gain when you buy that wisest, safest, best of investments—a Liberty Bond.

Nevertheless, when a man steps up to the post office or to a bank, his first dollar or two in his hand to buy a bond, we all like to feel that that man has come there not merely or mostly because he seeks an extra safe and profitable investment, but because he is inspired by the feeling of all for one and one for all.

Not primarily as investors, but as good American patriots, we are buying these Liberty Bonds.
