EULOGIZES THE WRONG DOG
Eloquence of Tactful Attorney Credited to Newspaper Story and He Loses His Case.
An old man was arrested for beating his wife. Application was made to have him put under a peace bond.
Thinking the case too small for him to bother with, relatives Cass and Comment, the county attorney asked Judge Albert D. Norton, then a young lawyer, to appear for the state at the trial. An attorney from Macon—a man who had quite a reputation as a "blender"—went over to defend the old man. Curled in front of the defendant was a yellow dog. Voss's "Eulogy of the Dog" had recently appeared in some paper. It was not nearly so familiar then as it has since become.
When the orator from Macon saw the yellow dog at the old man's feet he recalled Senator Voss's speech, and was alive to the opportunity for an effective appeal to the jury.
"Gentlemen," and he indicated the mongrel, "when all other friends desert the dog rompus. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies; and when the last scree of all comes, and when death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way; those by his graveside will be the noble dog he found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death!" So well was it delivered some of the jurymen cried. All looked toward the aged defendant sympathetically. It was said that even the dog's eyes were moist. It was pretty clear the defendant's lawyer had things coming his way; but Norton had the windup, and during the noon recess he hurried up a paper which had the dog speech in it. This he produced and read to the jury in the afternoon, word for word as opposing counsel recited, and which the jury thought was original.
"You see, gentlemen of the jury," said Norton, "Senator Voss was talking about another dog altogether. He never heard of this yellow cur!" The jury found the defendant guilty.

CAT HELPS FIND THE LEAK
Ingenuis Plumber Demonstrates Feline, With Aid of Catnip, Is Worth Having Around.
"There are more ways than one to kill a cat," says an old proverb, and "there are more ways than one to use a cat," is the new reading. Here is an illustration:
A plumber was called upon to locate a supposed leak in a ten-story tenement house. After a day's sodiation and undry fruitless soundings and sniffings, he finally hit upon a plan.
He went to a drug store and bought 39 cents' worth of fluid extract of valerian, commonly called catnip. Then he took the elevator to the top floor and poured the valerian diluted with water down the drain. Half an hour later he took a cat and visited each floor in turn.
The cat exhibited no interest until a room in the seventh story was reached.
Then, with a bound, it sprang from the plumber's arms and began to paw the wall, meowing loudly. A hole was made in the wall, and there, sure enough, was the leak.
That plumber deserves to make a fortune from his ingenuity.

The Duty of Parents.
What better legacy can parents leave their children than to teach them that success and prosperity are sired if they begin by doing everything well; by being so careful and exact in the performance of every duty, and making themselves so useful that their friends or employers "cannot do without them," and that when success begins to crown their efforts they will "be happier and no poorer" if they use some proportion of their wealth in aiding those less fortunate? Let parents and employers, both by example and precept, teach their children and their employees to be industrious, faithful, economical and scrupulously honest, and the daily papers will not send through our community so many records of crime and immorality.—Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

The Simple Breakfast.
Over, under and through all eating, the simple breakfast still stands supreme, declares A. J. R. in the Minneapolis Journal. A glass of water, a cereal or wheat biscuit with cream if abundance and a pinch from Colorado sliced in, two slices of bacon not so crisp that they break, two slices of home-made bread comfortably toasted, a cup of coffee poured upon the cream and sugar and stopped at exactly the right color, two of mother's doughnuts and, as you leave the table with a sigh of relief, if it be possible to get the hooks on one of baby's bits of chocolate candy for a topper, no great harm is done. With that breakfast, one may leave the house feeling that he is fortified until the noon hour rolls around again.

Why Look After Daddy?
Mary was going downtown with her father, and mother, after dressing her, gave a few instructions on how to behave. She ended with, "And, Mary dear, always hold daddy's hand when you are crossing the road." Mary looked up innocently. "Why, mamma," he said, "can't he take care of himself?"
