HIS GREAT SPEECH
 BY ELIAS KILLIAN

"Is this the Woodbrook accommodation?"
 He was tall, muscular and in a desperate hurry. It was an accommodation train he was after, but he spoke in limited express time.
 "Time's up," was the reply, and the man began to close the gate. He began to close it—but that was all. An arm like steel grasped the iron and, pushing back both gate and keeper, made a path and the young man did not tarry to hear the unpleasant words the gatekeeper said, but started in a full run down the platform. The train was beginning to move, but with a fine jump he caught the rail and then in continuance of his haste he threw himself against the door and moved quickly and intently down the aisles of the cars, going from one to the other in feverish intensity. It was the first train after the fashionable hours of business and society—the twilight train that carries people who have and who make money to their suburban homes.
 He met the conductor.
 "Captain," he said very rapidly, "is Miss Marlingham on this train?" and before the conductor could reply the young man had darted forward and was standing by an old lady whose generous lap was as full of bundles as a Friday bargain counter—it happened to be Friday, too. In the same seat next to the window sat a beautiful and placid young woman.
 "Why, how do you do, Mr. Faraday?"
 He took off his hat, but his speech was all directed to the elderly lady with the numerous spoils of shopping. "Madam," he said, "I'm very sorry to disturb you—very sorry—but I have something of extreme importance to say to this lady, and I must have the seat you are occupying."
 "Sir?"
 "Allow me to move your baggies to the seat opposite. Thank you much for your kindness. Just give them to me. That's it. Thank you! Be quick, please, as I must get off at the station after the next one."
 "Sir?"
 Before the bewildered matron could know what had happened she found herself escorted—driven—to the other seat and the bundles were falling back into her lap in heaps, and in the midst of it all the largest one broke and oranges rolled wildly forth. Then the young man dived after them. He could hardly do less—and it was a lot more than he wanted to do. In a few minutes he had the fruit, and, with more apologies, he jumped around, and took the seat beside the young lady.
 "Don't laugh," he said, "I don't speak. Just listen, and with deadly seriousness he went on. "I'm expected to make the principal speech at tonight's meeting. Must get off station after next so as to get back in time. Ten minutes ago I found that Dick Thompson is going out to your house tonight, and I know he is going to propose. Now all I ask is a fair show—just—"
 "Well, Mr. Faraday, what do you want?" and the blue eyes danced.
 "Miss Marlingham—Nellie—it's just this way. All I ask is that you hold out until I can have my say. If I know that I'm to have equal chances with Dick—it's downright mean of him to take advantage of me when he knows I must make that speech—oh, yes, we've been good friends and all that sort of thing—but it's just this way—why don't you see I can never—"
 "Really, Mr. Faraday, I have not the slightest idea that Mr. Thompson—"
 "I didn't say that you had, but I have, and I know what I am talking about. Now, Nellie, don't throw a fellow down. Hold your heart back for twenty-four hours. That's it—that's what I'm coming to."
 "Next station Dover," sang out the brakeman.
 "Give me your answer. I think I hear it now. Will you ruin that speech?" he asked. "Or will you give me hope—something to build on and work for? If so, when I am before that great audience, I can see your smile and feel your interest. I know I shall do something that is worthy—but if it's all up, then—"
 "I beg your pardon," said the conductor as he stopped at the seat. "Did I give you the right change?"
 "Too much?"
 "No, too little."
 "Then keep it and let me alone. Go away—please go away."
 "All out for Dover," sang the brakeman.
 "Nellie," he whispered, "stop laughing and tell me whether or not that speech is going to be a failure or a success—tell me enough to keep me from—"
 "Dover—all off," sang the voice, and Faraday arose.
 "Tell me," he asked.
 "I am sure your speech will be a great success and I shall be glad to have you tell me all about it tomorrow night," she said very sweetly.
 "God bless you," he exclaimed, as he ran down the aisle.

American Fund for French Wounded
 This week Mrs. J. G. Mott has sent off four large cases—very large cases they were, and tightly packed, too—of garments for the chilly liberated men and women and the poor little liberated children of the liberated villages of France. Highland Parkers responded promptly and generously to the appeal for these garments, made in this column recently. Also Mrs. Mott herself seems to have made very large, surreptitious donations of new clothes to the collection. Hence the four cases, so fine and large and tightly packed—one carrying women's garments, one men's garments, one for children from eight to sixteen and one for the babies under eight. Among the many things that found their way into those boxes were:
 2 dozen new boys' suits,
 11 men's overcoats,
 9 suits of men's clothes,
 12 women's sweaters,
 2 dozen new women's dresses,
 72 pairs of babies stockings,
 12 dozen pairs of other stockings,
 Shoes, underwear, etc.
 Later in the season Mrs. Mott will again collect and send off garments for the dwellers in those desolate liberated villages of France.
 Recently a call has come to the American Fund for 1,000 ambulance pillows. At the Fund headquarters a large supply of the material for these pillows is lying idle, waiting for the hands that might make it up. Why not help? Children can easily cut up the scraps with which the pillows are stuffed. As for the rest, the work is not hard. The Fund committee meets every Wednesday from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. at the Parish House of the Episcopal Church. Luncheon is served to the workers. Why not go there next Wednesday?
Young Women's Christian Association
 The Y. W. C. A. reception for soldiers' wives took place last week in the gymnasium of the association headquarters—a gymnasium very beautifully decorated in black and yellow in honor of the occasion and in deference to Halloween. Something more than half a hundred wives of soldiers were present and a formal program was presented by Mrs. W. A. Alexander, soprano, Mrs. C. G. Alexander, pianist and Miss Orva Stein, reader.

Red Cross Shop
 The shop announces that the Chicago office is now sending forth garments in the cut-out-ready-for-stitching state. These garments, suitable for the labors of clubs and church organizations, will be given out in neat surprise packets on Mondays and Tuesdays between the hours of nine and four at the Red Cross shop.

"Auxiliaries and branches who have been requested for supplies of various sorts by the men who have gone into service from their home communities will be interested in the following:—The Red Cross Supply Service has now established a camp director at practically every army and navy post in America; likewise has its representatives in touch with American Expeditionary Forces in France. All requests for supplies for men in the service are being referred to the Divisional Director having jurisdiction. He will in turn refer the request to the proper camp director supplying him with the goods needed. The advantages of this system are apparent. The camp directors who are on the ground can prevent duplication and waste of supplies. It will also be his duty to report what he finds to be the needs of the men at his post. In view of this splendid service the branches and auxiliaries of the Chicago Chapter are requested to refer, in writing all requests which they have for supplies for men in the service, to the Bureau of Military Relief, Chicago Chapter, 511 Garland Building." Y. W. C. A. NEWS
 The first meeting of the Mothers Club for this fall was held Tuesday evening in the Association Headquarters. Mrs. O. L. Olson, chairman of the Mothers club committee of the Board presided and made an earnest plea for the women present to register. A very interesting program was rendered consisting of several instrumental solos by Miss Elizabeth Morrison, who displayed a great deal of natural ability. Miss Alma Kelly rendered a most enjoyable reading and Miss Annie Clements the new Welfare worker who has recently come to the North Shore, told of her work here and the opportunities that the field presented. Her talk was full of suggestions, well worth considering. She closed by relating several personal experiences in her work at Detroit and Kalamazoo where she was employed before coming to the North Shore. Sandwiches and coffee was served and the meeting adjourned to meet December 4th.

The Y. W. C. A. in connection with the Patriotic League are busy rehearsing for a Pageant to be held about the last of November.

WHY OUR WOMEN ARE ASKED TO SIGN THE HOOVER CARDS
 One mealless and one wheatless day each week would mean millions of pounds of food for our allies, and none would suffer.
 If on one day of each week during the coming year the people of the United States did not eat any meat, and if on another day each week they did not consume any wheat products there would be a saving of:
 2,200,000 pounds of meat, and
 Between 80,000,000 and 90,000,000 bushels of wheat.
 Here is a concrete illustration of what a great nation we have become and how important our resources are in the struggle for world democracy. The American people are called upon to observe a meatless day and a wheatless day. There will be no hardship and yet the small sacrifice made by many will in the aggregate, become a powerful factor in the winning of victory.
 More than that, statistics prepared in Washington show that a reduction of the high cost of living is largely in the hands of the people, and that each consumer can, with the exercise of a little restraint, help his own pocketbook while performing a patriotic service.

Bell System
THINK OF HANDLING thirty million telephone calls a day! That is activity developed to its highest point. To furnish facilities for the transmission of this enormous, incomprehensible mass of messages is a gigantic undertaking.
THE BELL SYSTEM is meeting its responsibilities. There are delays but they are negligible when compared with the volume of the business. The public is helping; the people realize the pressure that the Telephone Companies are under.
NOT LONG AGO, at a big Army Post, an event of great interest, long looked for, transpired and the soldier man wanted to get word home as quickly as possible. A rush was made for every available telephone inside and outside the post. Result, calls piled up to an unheard-of number in the exchange serving the territory. There were delays, to be sure, but none of any great length, and finally all were cleared up.
A NOTICEABLE AND GRATIFYING FEATURE of the rush was the uniform good nature and patience of the soldiers. This not only made the work of attending to their wants easier and pleasanter, but it made it quicker.
