would think of that. While this war is on, so far as I can see, you wouldn't get the labor without paying prohibitive prices, and you wouldn't get the material without paying prohibitive prices. Any one will tell you that if we had to build these roads now, with the present prices of road material and with the present prices of labor, the $60,000,000 wouldn't begin to build the roads which are planned for.

"But most of the economists I have read predict a very serious business depression when our troops are released from the trenches and come back home, with the cessation of all these multifarious activities which have come as a result of the war. Many men will be thrown out of employment as a result; building material will be vastly cheaper. You will, therefore, not only build roads much cheaper than you would now, but you would also help to hold things steady by furnishing much needed employment to labor that otherwise would be idle.

"The time for public improvements always is when there is a business depression. Now, isn't it the part of wisdom, isn't it the part of statesmanship for us to be anticipating those times? We don't have to negotiate a single bond if the bond market is not right. We don't have to begin to build a single mile of road until labor and material conditions will warrant; but isn't it the part of wisdom now to think how we are going to bridge over that period of depression after the war? And how can we prepare so well against that day as by getting ready, when the end of the war comes, to go on with these public improvements?"

"I am willing to go upon record as saying that if the good roads bond issue is approved by the people next fall, I shall not attempt to market the bonds nor to begin this great work until the close of the war."

Possibly Bob LaFollette has read somewhere of the famous lad who denominated "grand, gloomy and peculiar."

Statement of Governor Lowden

"I would like to say a word with reference to the war and its relation to the good roads bonds. Even if these bonds are voted next fall and this war is still on, I wouldn't think, as Governor of this State, of trying to market these bonds immediately, or of starting immediately to build these roads; and I don't think any one else
