ECLIPSE OF THE SUN PLAINLY VISIBLE HERE

This Vicinity Offered Very Good Opportunity for Observers Last Saturday Afternoon

The eclipse on June 8th began precisely 5:25 p. m. At first the sky was blue and clear, and the black bite the moon made in the sun was easily visible. As the moon stole across the face of the sun the sky grew darker and darker, and the sunlight assumed a reddish hue, owing to the fact that the sun's center was hidden. When the moon had reached her three quarters limit in the eclipse, the sun's crescent could be seen through ordinary smoked glass or, by squinting even with the naked eye. At that time through the interstices of leaves on a tree or vine myriads of tiny crescents in inverted reflection could be seen on walls, floors and walks.

Our own vicinity offered very good opportunity for observers but only disappointment met the numerous scientific men who journeyed to Denver to see the total eclipse since clouds appeared shortly before the time of beginning and remained for fifty minutes.

The fundamental facts relating to a solar eclipse are quite simple. The moon in her monthly revolution around the earth, occasionally passes between us and the sun. The moon has no light of her own and when she shines it is by reflected sunlight. In a solar eclipse her unilluminated side is turned toward us, so that we see her as black disk intervening in front of the sun. A total eclipse of the sun is one of the most awe-inspiring spectacles in all the rounds of nature. Its overpowering effect upon the human mind is illustrated by an episode which was recorded in Norfolk, Virginia. It was a superb clear day and the town was crowded with visitors as well as native residents including a great many colored people, who had massed themselves in the streets to see the excitement. During the period of about an hour following "first contact" while the disk of the moon encroached more and more upon the face of the sun, the spectators, white and black, kept up a lively chatter of conversation. Most of them apparently found the phenomenon rather tame and wondered why people should have traveled miles to see it. Just before the moment of totality the light of day faded with startling abruptness, the beautiful solar corona flashed out, the stars appeared in the sky, and a ruddy glow as of late sunset encircled the horizon. Just then the babel of conversation ceased instantly and was succeeded by the crash of breaking glass. Totally unprepared for so marvelous a sight, many people, especially among the colored portion of the crowd, let fall the pieces of smoked glass through which they had been watching the eclipse. It was a case of primitive fear and the sharp impact of the sublime.

On Wednesday, June 5th the following Highland Park boys registered for military duty, according to the proclamation of President Wilson. The registration number follows each name:

ELM PLACE SCHOOL

Sixteen pupils representing Elm Place and the High School laid aside their school work Monday to act in the movies. The occasion was a dramatization of a school of a hundred years ago, and this was done under the management of the State Department of Public Instruction of Springfield. Mr. U. J. Hoffman, Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction, was present and directed the work. The part of the school master was taken by Mr. Hunt of Chicago who forty years or more ago taught in an old-time school and who in physical appearance very happily represented the old-time school master. A log cabin on South Green Bay Road loaned to the state for that purpose by Murray and Terry had been fitted up to represent both in its interior and exterior the typical meagerly equipped log school house of long ago. Messrs Birch and McComas representing the Pathoscope company operated the motion picture camera and staged the performance. A part of the scenes were photographed representing the children assembling at the school house playing ante-oven and interior scenes where the ABC class recited, spelling lessons were heard and "pieces" were spoken. Those who represented the school children were: Betty Bourneque, Helen Watson, Frank Barr, Arthur Olson, Frank Wagner, Jack Benson Orelle Hathaway Dwight Moore, Sam Holmes, Elizabeth Holland, Elmore Morgan, Elsie Sharpe, Elizabeth Doty, Clara Holland, and Crawford Merritt.

The film will be edited and finished by July first but it is not likely that the state department of public instruction will release it for general use until after it has been exhibited at the state fair in Springfield in August. After that time it will be shown at Highland Park and other places in the state.
