308 W. Madison St. W. H. SALISBURY & CO. Chicago ... at Collin Bell,

By IMES MACDONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was just after noon on Saturday, and the only remaining man in the office pushed back from his desk with tf a sigh that was half a curse, gazing intently out over the irregular top of Manhattan toward the blue-hazed bay. Collin Bell had just been going over his accounts, and he was twelve hundred and eighty odd dollars shortalmost a year's salary! For a long 20 five minutes he sat there running over the details in his mind. He was al ready past thirty, and, although almost overwhelmed with the desire to succeed, he had been unable to get beyond his present salary, all of which it took for him to live in what he call-

He might go on for several years without having the shortage discovered, or he might "cut and run for it," and have the thing discovered in a day. The impossibility of his ever making up a deficiency out of his 20pd salary was apparent, and yet something had to be done! At this mement his ponderings were interrupted. "Pardon me," came a voice, "but where is my father?" He turned in surprise to face Inez Vrain, the "Old Man's" daughter. He had seen her often enough to know her by sight, and also to know that his whole year's salary wouldn't buy her clothes for six months, and he had neither awe nor any particular admiration for her, except, of course, as something pleasant to look at.

"Mr. Vrain has gone to Philadelphia to attend an important conference," he explained, "and won't be home till Monday.'

"Then why didn't someone telephone me?" she demanded.

"I'm sure I don't know," he said "He promised to take me to lunchtf eon and to give me his whole afternoon," she said, disappointedly, "and now everything's spoiled." Bell grinned. It wasn't polite of him but he couldn't help it. Some people's troubles were so trivial! "Just for that," she said primly, "I'll have to request you to excort me to 20 the Delange for luncheon. I've come all the way into town to be lunched with by a man, and as long as father one, I suppose." Collin Bell was rather taken back by this unique request, but he had his week's salary in his pocket and trusted that would see him through.

"Very well," he said, "If you in-And a few moments later they were seated at a cozy table for two in a rather crowded dining foom, inspecting each other curiously. They both seemed surprised to be getting on so well together, and before she knew it, Inez Vrain was chattering to Collin Bell as if he were a favored friend of her own social world.

But suddenl, Bell's face underwent a change. Coming toward them, preceded by the head walter, was the "Old Man," followed by a friend. The "Old Man," noticed Bell, and started to how genially, when he caught the curve of passing on, he stopped. "Hello, Bell," he said cordially extending his hand, and successfully cov-

Bell drew down the lid of his left eye, and the "Old Man" just caught "To be sure," he said easily, "but s wire came at the last minute and postponed It." And as he moved away he said in an off-hand manner: "Wish you'd drop into my office the first thing Monday morning, Bell. I want to go into that Philadelphia matter." And Collin Bell was not sure, but he thought the "Old Man" winked at him. On Monday morning the "Old Man" leaned back in his chair and grinned

"You've been 'iere five or six years Bell, and I never noticed you partieslarly before. But you've got tact, ob you know that? Of course, I'd forgotten Ipez entirely Saturday and your quickness with that Philadelphia story saved me a bad half hour with a certain young woman who has a temper and a clever tongue.";

The "Old Man" drew his private check book toward him and passed over a check to Bell for $1,500.

"This is coming to you on last year's salary," he said. "From today you are to be my personal representative at five thousand a year."

For a moment Judson stared at his daughter, and then he grinned a little. Pershing Pays for Pig.

General Pershing's automobile cently killed a growing plg, the mos valuable possession of a poor, aged woman. The woman wept, as the pig meant much to her. She knew the car contained the American general but she was told not to make a claim as the pig was to blame.

General Pershing later institute an inquiry and learned the situation. How much the pig meant to the des titute woman was shown when her tears of grief changed to joy when a letter arrived containing a check for $20, with kind words besides,-New York Herald.

Times Have Changed.

Whatever other platitude may be successfully controverted, there's no use denying that the world does move Yesterday I saw a Sioux Indian, in feathers, moccasins and paint, boarding a Broadway trolley to go down to the Fifth avenue theater and sell Liberty bonds, and, ten minutes later, I saw a retired brigadier general of the United States army, who received from an Indian runner the first intelligence of the Custer massacre chattily discussing, over his noonda toddy, in Waldorf Astoria bar, the probable developments on the western front in Europe, -- New York Letter.

SOMETHING MORE THAN "TOY"

Quaint Old Legend Having to Do With Plow is Peculiarly Appropriate Just Now.

There is a quaint old legend of Alsace, recalls the Christian Science Monitor, concerning a family of giants who, once upon a time, lived in a certain castle in the old country. The moral of the story seems appropriate "It was a decent thing for him to at a time when the French minister fort to encourage the cultivation of had just raised him this morning to land.

The giants lived, says the legend, far from the peasants of the plain and one day the daughter of the house, who though quite a child, was already thirty feet high, strolled toward i plain and saw a laborer peacefully plowing his fields. She picked up the peasant, the horse and the plow and put them in her pinafore and returned to the castle to show what she had found to her father.

"What you think is but a toy," said the giant, "is what produces the food which enables us to live. Put back the laborer and his horse where you found them." From that time onward, adds the tale, the peasants were never molested by the giants.

Women Soldiers.

Advertisements of Molly Pitcher of Revolutionary fame as the first feminine soldier in the United States have appeared. Perhaps she was the first, but certainly she wasn't the only one Aine

There was Nancy Hart of Georgia, who took ten Tories prisoners; Deborah Sampson of Massachusetts, who enlisted in the Continental army, fought in battle after battle, her sex unsps pected, and headed military expeditions; Frances Hook of Illinois, who served in the Union army during the Civil war; Frances Wilson of New Jersey, Mary Owens of Pennsylvania. Major Belle Reynolds of Illinois.

Most famous of our Joans of Arc were Major Pauline Cushman, a Federal scout, and Capt. Belle Boyd, s Confederate spy, who saved Stonewall Jackson's army from destruction.

All the women who won reputations as soldiers proved themselves as brave, efficient and hardy as any man could be. Here's wishing more power to their elbow !- Spokane Spokesman Review.

Medicinal Literature.

The Lendon Lancet departs for a moment from the austere halls of science to adventure into the fields and gardens of literature, though keep one foot safe within the accustor medical precincts. The Lancet dis cusses nothing less worthy than the works, writings, theories, maxims and pleasantries of Master Francols Rabelais, the point being that his diversions into letters were simply part of his day's work as a practical medico. He wrote, the Lancet assures us, not for the untold generations of the future, not for the delectation of our own selves, but solely and strictly to amuse, hearten and brace up the spirits of his patients during the tedium of their illness, thereby siding his cures and adding to his stature as member of the faculty.
