Later, on the stage of the ball room, a number of Jackies gave a vaudeville performance. Talent of a high order was displayed by the young men and the audience was greatly entertained. RESCUE OF A HORSE OLD, BLIND AND LAME

Anyone Witnessing Cruelty to Animals May Notify Miss Ruth Ewing, Who Will Intervene.

A practical illustration of the protective humane work that is daily being done by the Illinois Humane Society was enacted on the streets of Highland Park one day last week.

Mrs. Stewart E. Brown's attention was attracted by a team of bay horses, hauling two empty but heavy wagons, one of the team being very lame. Touched by the pathetic appearance of the animal, she lost no time in reporting it to Miss Ruth Ewing, a director and very active worker of the Humane Society, who went at once to see the horse in question.

She found it to be old, thin, blind and suffering from a painful injury on one knee which rendered the animal entirely unfit for service.

It was learned that the team belonged to a man living in Chicago who had hired them out for work at Great Lakes Station, where one of the horses had received a severe blow from the pole of a wagon, the day before, severely injuring the knee of the right fore leg.

Miss Ewing quietly ordered the driver to unharness the lame horse and lead it to Martin Ringdahl's stable for feed and water and a night's rest in a bedded stall. She called Officer Sullivan of the Highland Park Police Force, who appeared as by magic on a motor cycle within four minutes, to pilot the man to the place, asking the officer to notify the department that the horse was to be given to no one without authority from the Illinois Humane Society.

The driver protested that the owner had been informed of the injury to the horse and had ordered him to drive the animal to Chicago that night, and that he must obey orders and continue the trip. Miss Ewing was firm in her assertion that the horse was not able to travel a block—to say nothing of 25 miles—and that it was a violation of law to work a horse in such a suffering condition; in short, that she would insist upon detaining the animal in Highland Park for rest and proper care.

Whereupon Dobbin was straightway led to the barn, less than a quarter of a mile away, almost doubling down to the pavement with every step, so distressingly lame had he become. The police officers and stable men commended Miss Ewing for her action when they saw the horse sink down in a stall from pain and exhaustion, the result of the weary miles it had traveled from Great Lakes. Good food, water and rest did much to restore the jaded beast.

In the morning, Humane Officer Brayne (one of the special police officers in the employ of the Humane Society) came out from Chicago to take charge of the case. At first he thought the horse too far gone to make it practicable to try to restore him to working condition, as the treatment would cost the owner more than the horse was worth, and so recommended that it be humanely destroyed. The owner, who had come out with the Humane Officer, made a strong plea, however, to be allowed to try to save the animal, which of course was most satisfactory to the Society providing he would agree not to work it and would give it sufficient rest and veterinary care.

This was agreed upon, and Dobbin is now taking a much needed and greatly appreciated rest-care at the James Sheahan Farm, west of Highland Park, and is showing wonderful improvement under the changed conditions. He will remain in the custody of the Humane Officer until pronounced "fit for service."

This is only one of the many cases of cruelty handled by the Humane Society. During last year alone it rescued 1,182 child victims of cruel abuse and vicious environment, and relieved 30,313 animals from abusive treatment. All those wishing to promote the cause of humanity in the interest of helpless children and animals should report cases of cruelty coming to their attention to the Illinois Humane Society, 1145 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago. Telephones: Harrison 8185 and 8186. Those wishing to become members will kindly communicate with the Society.

STUDENT-ARTIST DAY RAVINIA, AUGUST 23

Florence M. Grandland, Student of Arne Oldberg Will Play on Piano. Bertha Kribben the Violin

On Friday the regular Student-Artist Day, will be presented Miss Florence M. Grandland, as pianiste, and Miss Bertha Kribben, violinist.

Miss Grandland was born at Maywood, Illinois, and at the age of seven began her musical education under the direction of Dr. Francis Hemington, of Oak Park. During the ten years spent with him she showed an almost unnequally ability for sight reading, and accompanying, which has developed even more as her musical education has progressed.

Three years ago she entered Northwestern University School of Music, studying piano with Prof. Arne Oldberg, and composition and theory with Dr. J. C. Latkin. Miss Grandland completed the four-year course in less than three years and was graduated in June, receiving her degree with highest honors.
