KEEP THE HOME STORES GOING

The Buy-at-Home movement which the Press has mentioned heretofore in its columns is so vital a question to Highland Park and so far-reaching in its results that it is difficult to estimate its importance in words. At present we are all, more or less, directly under the supervision of the Federal Government. Our store keepers in Highland Park are not only operating under government regulations but are daily subject to new orders from Washington. This condition is not hard for us to realize just now while the hand of the government is being felt in every household—in the matter of food, in fuel, traveling, building, shipping, and the disposition of our incomes.

Now when even the large stores in Chicago are being restrained in their business policy by government regulations necessary to the prosecution of the war, we can easily see what the effect might be on the store-keeper in Highland Park. But still we expect him to run his business and to hold himself in readiness for our supplementary trade as he has always done—to be generally obliging, cash our checks, and extend our credit in return for a very small part of our trade. The time has come, however, when he must have more than our supplementary trade; he must have a good share of our trade if he is to carry on a profitable business.

Laying aside the question of civic pride and duty to Highland Park, let us consider this matter merely as a question of expediency for the shopper. A few months ago she could send out several pairs of shoes, coats, suits or what not, without the necessity of taking her children into the city, and those articles which were found to be unsuitable could be sent back to the store or taken back to the store in Chicago at leisure. Today all is changed of the old order, and that courtesy which the big stores in Chicago have been in the habit of extending to their patrons has been withdrawn by order of the Government. All articles taken from the stores now must be returned within three days, which means that the busy shopper must make another trip to the city with apparel which is found to be unsuitable or manage to have it returned within the time limit of three days.

With the increased cost of transportation, of luncheons, and incidentals in Chicago, the suburbanite is going to find trading in Chicago increasingly expensive and little short of an indulgence to those who are seriously concerned about the question of economy at this time.

Now if the big stores are operating under great difficulty, what must be the condition of the stores here at home? And yet we find them at present well stocked and doing good business, but if the women of Highland Park persist in giving the majority of their trade to Chicago, the result will be a surprising economic waste not only for themselves but for this community, and a marked falling off in the stocks, facilities, and conveniences of our home stores.

Before this condition comes to pass give the Highland Park stores your trade, and the stocks and varieties will increase in direct ratio to your demands, but do not wait until we have no home stores and trading in the city has become prohibitive and then try to create a home supply store by some organized movement of the community; for whatever else may be said on this subject, it is an indisputable fact that Highland Park, with its large population of children, could not get on without shoes and wearing apparel for its boys and girls in the home stores.
