

LARGE AUDIENCE AT COMMUNITY SERVICE

FIRST MEETING SUCCESSFUL

Dr. Herbert L. Willett of the University of Chicago Spoke on "The Church and Reconstruction"

If the churches of Highland Park had any uncertainty as to the success of the new community service enterprise, all doubts must have been dispelled at the first experiment in these meetings last Sunday evening.

Dr. Willett gave a careful resume of the development of Prussian militarism from its inception in 1701 in which he showed the medieval lust for power of the Hohenzollerns, had, untouched by the march of civilization, transmitted its dominant ambition faithfully through two hundred years of parental succession.

But science failed them. It proved to them that it is impossible for a nation or an individual to develop one side of human nature at the expense of another.

Dr. Willett then made a brief summary of the by-products of the war; the intimate knowledge of foreign peoples that has been acquired through mutually confronting a common danger and a common foe.

No satisfactory outline can well be given of this inspiring address of Dr. Willett for those who were so unfortunate as to miss the service last Sunday evening.

However, Mr. Koch sang both songs and sang them as only he can sing, for all who hear him will admit that there is something new here—something almost revolutionary in the power of song.

"Though we may forget the singer, we will not forget the song."

Since all who have ever heard Raymond Koch sing "The Americans Have Come" are quite sure they will never forget either the singer or the song.

VICTORY THANKSGIVING MEETING NOVEMBER 13

An Expression of Solemn Thanksgiving for Righteous Victory and Peace

On Wednesday night, November 13, the citizens of Highland Park assembled in the auditorium of the Presbyterian church in an expression of solemn thanksgiving for righteous victory and peace.

It was a large and earnest audience which felt itself impelled, on this occasion, to react from the boisterous demonstration of the streets and express its joy in a manner commensurate with the profound significance of the hour.

He gave a brief summary of the growth and scientific perfection of Prussian militarism, pointing out the succession of victories of the allies in the face of what seemed to be unsurmountable odds.

It was an address and an occasion long to be remembered for its solemn beauty—a quiet climax in a turbulent and historic week.

LAKE COUNTY FOREST PRESERVE LOOMS AGAIN

PLAN HAS BIG ENDORSEMENT

Territory of Natural Scenic Beauty Should be Preserved Intact by Residents of the County

The enthusiasts in behalf of the Lake County Forest Preserve, who have been engrossed with war activities, burst forth again last week in a victory spirit splendidly keyed to home necessities.

The mayors of Waukegan, Lake Forest and Highland Park together with Everett Millard, moving spirit in the plan to save these acres of scenic beauty for the people of the county all express heartiest endorsement of the idea that we should waste no time in bringing the preserve before the citizens of Lake County.

"Lake County is the threshold of that vast territory leading out of Chicago. This territory has a great wealth of natural scenic beauty which should be preserved intact to the people of Lake County."

"We should follow the lead of Cook county and take steps to form a forest preserve at once in justice to Lake County. We cannot lag behind in this preservation movement.

"This is the psychological time. The war is over. People are turning back to civic and community interests. They have become used to doing big things in a big way. This is the biggest thing that could possibly be done for Lake County.

"I heartily endorse this campaign for the preservation of the Lake County Forest Preserve and will cooperate in every possible way toward its accomplishment," declared William W. Pearce, mayor of Waukegan.

"I unhesitatingly say that the movement toward the acquisition of a Forest Preserve for Lake County is sound in principle and is of the utmost importance to Lake County.

It should be fully and freely supported by its residents," declared Keene Addington, mayor of Lake Forest.

Everett Millard of Highland Park, one of the best friends of the movement since its initiation last spring a year ago, when citizens were called

An Appeal from the Committee in Charge

We are thankful that the war is over. It will be a wonderful day for all of us when the boys come home, but if our hearts thrill at the sight of the marching battalions, how much will theirs at sight of New York harbor and their native land.

But on board will stand another little band of sightless heroes who will be deprived of the inspiring view of flags and welcoming crowds. It is to these blind patriots that our hearts go out in a deeper feeling. Words of sympathy are empty and futile. Our sympathy can be expressed to them only in one way—helpfulness.

Thus it is that the call of the Permanent Blind Relief war fund strikes us with deeper appeal than any other activity of the war.

The people of the allied countries have said that "Not one of these blinded shall stand upon the street corner begging alms with pencils and shoe laces."

Science is co-operating with sympathy to prevent such a disgrace upon our civilization.

No blind hero shall set out his heart through years of enforced idleness while he lives in a world of darkness.

The sightless can never again see the sunshine play upon the stars of our flag, they can only know of its presence as their increased sensitive hearing recognizes the flutter in the breeze by sound alone.

France and England, early in the war took the lead in this constructive work of training the sightless to instruction. In America, this work
