SIMPLE, LIKE THE FOURTH DIMENSION

Almost anybody, except the farmer, can settle the most important food problems offhand.

Any city editor can prove that milk prices are outrageous, and that bacon should come from the fabled golden calf instead of a mere hog; considering the price it is selling for.

But it really is not so simple as it looks.

One wouldn't imagine that milk, cheese, butter, bacon, lard, ham, fresh pork, sausage, condensed milk, veal, and ice cream all must advance materially when the nation goes to eating whole wheat bread.

But the family patent flour, that used seventy per cent of the wheat and left thirty per cent as bran and shorts, gave the dairymen, the cattle feeders, the hog raisers, a concentrated, cheap winter feed that was the mainstay of these industries.

Along comes the war and 100 per cent wheat flour, and no mill feed, or else mill feed at 100 per cent advance.

At one fell swoop the dairy interests, the hog growers, and likewise the big poultry plants, faced a 100 per cent boost in their winter feed bills, and the result has been that the breeding stock of the country has been rushed to the packers this winter, and no matter how low feed prices drop the price for dairy products and for eggs and for pork will stay up because there will be more demand than supply.

The much cursed patent flour, and the much scorned by health advisors white bread was the mainstay that preserved cheap milk, butter, eggs and pork products to this nation in the winter time.

Almost any dairymen knew this. So did the millers.

But they were not running the legal machinery, nor fixing the standards and prices.

The farmer gets stung, frequently, but finally the consumer in town pays for the salve that greases his stings.

Because the farmer can quit feeding cows but the town must eat.

All the new congress will have to do to become popular will be to keep everybody's wages up and reduce the prices of everything.

The Germans feel that to secure a peace of justice, Belgium must pay an indemnity for standing in the way of the Boche soldiers.
