Some people think that the remedy for the poverty of the world, which was hardly able to feed itself on a ten hour day is to cut the working time to six hours a day five days a week.

We are continuing this week the excellent letter written by Mrs. Quayle to her daughter, the first part of which was published in last week's issue of The Press:

From Verdun which we left at 3 P. M. we went to the battle fields. In the trenches, dugouts, shellholes, were things left by the soldiers. In some were the clothes, everything of the MAN gone but a few bones. On the wire entanglements I saw some clothes—and a few bones left—a ghastly sight. For the most part, all that is cleared away, the remains carefully and reverently cared for and marked by a white cross, the flag and tag. Surely, some good must come to the world else these young lives lost are lost in vain.

We went on to the frontier of Luxembourg, all the way seeing the signs and tracks of war, until nearing the frontier; then the trees along the "route nationale" were not down, the fields were cultivated. At Longwy, the large fortified town of the frontier, every thing is bright and clean, prosperous. This condition exists all thru Luxembourg. Fine clean houses, the broad tableland of the Lorraine saddleback—50 kilometres wide—all cultivated, beautifully growing crops, fine horses and cattle. Luxembourg is a beautiful city, very like an American one. Electricity, baths, steam heat—maybe we were not glad to get to a hotel! To come out of a nice cool bed-room in the morning, which had a radiator in it, into the hall which FELT and SMELT warm, after the icy dampness of France.

I purchased some things in Luxembourg that I might talk with the business people. Found two native Luxembourgers who told of the political and economic conditions. As it is surrounded by other states, it is dependent on railways for everything. In 1916, they had no food and had a dreadful time. The people are more German or Belgian in appearance than French. They speak a mixture of French and German, a dialect. Their Government is still excited, with Charlotte on the throne. Marie is pro-German, the gentlemen both spoke English. They told me in this manner: "We hate, hate, hate the Germans." Some of them think it would be wise to coalesce with Belgium. The French are in power, but there is an ostensible Luxembourg government.
