MARGARET HELEN KEAGLE PASSES AWAY SATURDAY

Funeral Services Held Early Monday Morning from Residence. Interment Near Rockford

Margaret Helen Keagle, daughter of Rev. Joseph and Henry Keagle, of 25 South Green Bay road, was born in Stockton, Jo Daviess county, Ill., July 8, 1894, and died in Highland Park, Ill., June 28, 1919, aged eight days less than 25 years. She was educated in the schools of several cities where the exegences of the itinerant preacher called the family from time to time, graduating from the high school of Freeport, Ill., in 1912. She taught in the rural schools for two years, and then entered the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses at Chicago, Ill., where she completed the course, graduating in September, 1918. She took the state examination for a registered nurse and received her certificate, when she was suddenly stricken down in health and a careful examination discovered that she had developed a case of Tuberculosis of the lung. It proved to be the worst form of the disease for all the modern methods applied to the disease failed to stop its ravages, and in a few months she succumbed to the inevitable end.

Margaret was a Christian and a member of the church from her earliest girlhood and was prepared to die. She was not afraid of death but wanted so badly to live, and had made such splendid preparation to live and serve her generation. She had volunteered for army service and expected to go last February to France, but it was not to be and her untimely death can only be explained by the God of all grace who knoweth all things from the beginning and who doeth all things well. She possessed a beautiful character and a sweet and winning disposition won her many friends and a host of people beside her parents, one sister and four brothers mourn her loss.

The funeral services were held in Highland Park early Thursday morning, and the interment at the home cemetery north of Rockford, Ill. Dr. H. H. Thoren, presiding elder of Chicago District had charge of the services and delivered the address. Friends were present from Chicago, Rogers Park, Naperville, Rockford, Freeport, Rocton, Shirland and Cedarville.

HIGHLAND PARK IS NO "POODLE CITY"

This city makes a stir in defending herself against the indictment of "Poodle City." The Chicago Examiner takes up Highland Park's mild rebuttal and, while applauding our natural pride in our children amuses itself at the expense of an overzealous Tribune reporter. Thanks to the Examiner. To minimize the number of our children, or to underrate their solid reality, known and felt from lake to Skokie, is a very grave offense. Highland Park believes that her children are the best thing she has ever done. Poodles—Bah! Thanks once more to the Examiner.

Here is the article: "An earnest young reporter, paid a visit to Highland Park the other day, saw a poodle dog in an electric, and leaped to the conclusion that the suburb was threatened with race suicide.

The doughty Highland Park Press, reading the story, sprang to the defense investigated vital statistics, compared the canine and juvenile populations and came back with a half column rebuttal.

"Highland Park," said The Press yesterday, "is simply alive with children. Furthermore, they're fine, robust, noisy specimens. There are a thousand children for every poodle. Highland Park is a city of many children."

"Alas," concludes the Press, "that the fair name of a city should be impugned to make 'copy.'"

THE EPIDEMIC OF STRIKES
While the people are clamoring for a reduction in cost of living, strikes are occurring all over the country. In so far as wages are advanced, the prices of goods are marked up to pay for the same. The advances do not come out of the profits, as some people imagine, but are simply added to the prices of goods. So in effect the people take money from one set of workers to give it to another. It is a general scramble with the devil to take the hindmost.

The country is very anxious to have all workers get fair pay and decent comforts. But it will resent the action of those who demand more than their fair share. Also when workers in trades requiring little skill and intelligent, educated or highly trained workers, they are striving against the processes of nature, and cannot maintain any such position very long.
