DEATHS

Adolph William Berglund
 Adolph William Berglund, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Berglund, was born in Denver, Colorado, Oct. 10, 1900. After a residence of four years in Colorado Mr. and Mrs. Berglund moved to Chicago. Eleven years later they came to Highland Park where they have since resided.

On Palm Sunday in May, 1916, Adolph was confirmed with a class of 34 young people by the Rev. C. Edward Derr, pastor of the English Evangelical Lutheran church of the Ascension, Lincoln street and Cornelia avenue, Chicago. After coming to Highland Park he continued his custom of attending Sunday school and enrolled as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School. On June 12, 1919, he transferred his church membership to this church under the pastorate of Rev. E. Terreau.

Adolph always had a sunny disposition and wore a smile that won many friends and will ever live as a rich memory with those who formed his acquaintance. He was quick to detect genuine Christianity and equally quick to sense the false. He was generous, kind and true to all he met and particularly affectionate to his parents.

For several days previous to going to the hospital he had not been feeling well. During this time there was no indication of the seriousness of his condition. On Friday, the 20th, in the evening the true nature of his case was discovered and he was taken to the Lake Forest hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. The case proved to be the most serious of its kind in the experience of those present. He rallied from the operation and on Monday morning gave every promise of recovery. He made a most heroic fight for life but on Tuesday morning it became evident that he was waging a losing fight. He died Wednesday, June 25th, at 4:45 a. m. at the age of 18 years, 8 months and 15 days. He was preceded by a little brother and sister and is survived by the father, mother and two little sisters, Hazel and Lillian.

On the Sunday evening following the operation the minister requested each person in the audience to offer a prayer in his behalf. After the service we called at the bedside. After a most intimate religious conversation, Adolph requested prayer. After the prayer he expressed his heartfelt gratitude for the prayers of the people and requested that these prayers be continued. On Monday morning we again called at the hospital. The conversation at once turned to the subject of our personal relation to God. It was at this time that he received a positive and clear assurance that he was an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ, the Lord and Saviour. On Tuesday morning he again expressed his gratitude for the prayers of Christian people and greatly desired to live to serve his Master in an active Christian life. He expressed no fear of the change that might come to him, but hoped to be restored to health and rejoiced in the prospect of rejoining his associates and with them win as many to Christ as possible. This was his last message to us. He went asleep in the glorious hope of a blessed and victorious resurrection.—Contributed.

NUMBER 20 THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1919

THE CADDIE—AN AMERICAN BOY

Highland Park is situated in the very heart of the golf country. It is surrounded with golf clubs on every side so that it becomes a natural ground for observations and deductions in regard to such organizations and their comparative merits.

Growing up around these clubs and simultaneously with these clubs is the caddie. In the last fifteen years such a vast army of American boys have joined the caddie ranks that the caddie can well be considered as a member of a great and vital organization. The caddie, as a rule, is a good sport. As a rule, he is a better player than the member. He knows his value as a sportsman. He knows that he has certain sporting rights to a genuine participation in the game. If, on the other hand, his rights as a sportsman are ignored, he does not sulk or balk the game. When he "strikes," if indeed he ever does, it is done simply as a playful reminder. He does not entrench himself behind a sense of justice and strike like a teamster or a waiter, but he does lean heavily upon his sporting rights. As a sportsman he has a standard of measurement and a code all his own; and when an individual player or a club, for that matter, disregards his rights as a part of the sport, ignores his citizenship as a sportsman, he is not slow to register his disapproval of that man and that club.

In a town where clubs abound as they do in and about Highland Park, the caddies are sure to draw unfavorable comparisons. The Exmoor club, as made a glowing record in respect to the treatment of its caddies. They regard these boys as young American citizens. They have provided a caddie house for them where they can rest and find shelter from the rain. Comfortable seats, fresh ice-water, and even books form part of the provision for the caddies, the latter having been recently abandoned as impractical. In many cities, Detroit for instance, some remarkable innovations have been made for these boys.

Much remains to be done in Highland Park for the caddies of the golf clubs, and much remains to be done in America for this army of boys who will one day, perhaps, be called to the country's defense. These boys have learned to be good sportsmen on every school ground in this great land of ours, and it is an outrage that they should be forced to see at close range the utter lack of American manhood and good sportsmanship which exists in the heart of many a man for whom they may caddie. It is a common assumption, of course, that the caddie is always in the wrong. This is a grave mistake. Many a man passes as a gentleman when seen about the club house, but, if you wish to satisfy yourself, watch him with his caddie, and you will find the gentleman's number quite as visible and glaring as the metal badge worn by the boy with the bag.
